problem of environmental crisis through the theological discipline of ecclesiology Using the Catholic Archdiocese of Lilongwe's understanding of Church as the Family of God the book concludes that the application of the concept of Church as family of God while bringing great social cohesion among the people failed to extend to human relationships with the natural world in fact It has broadened the human feeling of superiority over the natural environment The book provides an ecclesiological complementarity which promotes a universal fraternity among people and the natural world and recommends an ecclesiological concept of Church as New Creation Nova creatio This would serve as a call for human beings to make a new ecological conversion leading new lifestyles change in their models of nature worldviews and change in the models of production and consumption

Myth and National Identity in Nineteenth-Century Britain Stephanie Barczewski, 2000-03-02 Scholars have become increasingly interested in how modern national consciousness comes into being through fictional narratives Literature is of particular importance to this process for it is responsible for tracing the nation's evolution through glorious tales of its history In nineteenth century Britain the legends of King Arthur and Robin Hood played an important role in construction of contemporary national identity These two legends provide excellent windows through which to view British culture because they provide very different perspectives King Arthur and Robin Hood have traditionally been diametrically opposed in terms of their ideological orientation The former is a king a man at the pinnacle of the social and political hierarchy whereas the latter is an outlaw and is therefore completely outside conventional hierarchical structures The fact that two such different figures could simultaneously function as British national heroes suggests that nineteenth century British nationalism did not represent a single set of values and ideas but rather that it was forced to assimilate a variety of competing points of view
