Goals In Space:

Goals in Space William Sims Bainbridge, 1991 Goals in Space draws upon a detailed sample of 4 000 Americans to discover what values this society attaches to the space program Systematic survey procedures identify 125 specific goals of the space program and Bainbridge examines how these represent the perceived general values of spaceflight including economic industrial environmental social spiritual emotional and military benefits While the most popular justifications for spaceflight offered immediate gain for the current society many Americans have a clear image of the revolutionary transformations that spaceflight may accomplish in the long run notably colonization of the solar system The findings of this study clarify the ideological bases for space technology and set the terms for the future debate on investment in space exploration

National Aeronautics and Space Administration, 1991 America's Space Futures George C. Marshall Institute, 2013-12-01 America's Space Futures is an important contribution to the ongoing debate about space policy the American space program and the human destiny in space It lays out alternative paradigms and frameworks for assessing America's future in space and how different visions would require changes to America's current approach to space development and exploration Since the end of the Apollo program in the 1970s the U S civil space program has accomplished a great number of things from deploying orbital observatories that see into deep space and exploring objects around the solar system robotically to studying the earth and building the International Space Station perhaps the most challenging engineering feat ever achieved by man Yet the program frequently finds itself adrift when these missions come to an end Consequently space experts have long worried that the sum total of NASA's accomplishments is somehow still less than the total value of its component parts Policymakers respond by establishing national commissions and expert panels to help lay out a long term guiding vision for the space program From the National Commission on Space in the 1980s through 1990's Advisory Committee on the Future of the U S Space Program the Columbia Accident Investigation Board to the National

Research Council in 2012 panel after panel has bemoaned the lack of a unifying vision for the space program Unable to sustain such a vision over the course of several Presidential administrations the White House and Congress have papered over the uncertainty with compromises that sometimes leave NASA working against itself and no one satisfied In 2013 The Space Foundation one of the United States largest space education organizations insisted NASA needs to embrace a singular unambiguous purpose that leverages its core strengths and provides a clear direction for prioritizing tasks and assigning resources America's Space Futures responds by considering the costs benefits and risks of different visions for the American space program Contributors who all have years of experience working on space issues from a variety of perspectives civil commercial military intelligence academic and advocacy offer out of the box thinking and analyses that lays out a space future and sets priorities to achieve a specific national goal These include space commerce and commercialization maximizing American soft power through international space cooperation settling the solar system and advancing the frontiers of technology Their goal is to raise new ideas sharpen differences rather than blur them and establish better foundations for setting the space program on a path for a brighter future Essayists include William B Adkins president of Adkins Strategies and an aerospace engineer with experience in the civil and national security space communities Charles M Miller President of NextGen Space a space entrepreneur and former NASA Senior Advisor for Commercial Space Dr Scott D Pace Director of George Washington University's Space Policy Institute and a former senior official at NASA and the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy Eric Sterner a Fellow at the George C Marshall Institute adjunct professor at Missouri State University and a former senior official at NASA and the House Science and Armed Services Committees and Dr James A Vedda a senior policy analyst at the Aerospace Corporation with years of experience in the Department of Defense author of two books on the space program and a former associate professor at the University of North Dakota

Europe in the Global Space Economy Patrizia Caraveo, Clelia Iacomino, 2023-08-28 This book analyzes the policies and space economy programs of major space faring nations and explores whether the present institutional set up in Europe is adequate to address the challenges At the core of the discussion are the relative roles of governments and markets in a highly dynamic panorama that involves advancements in science modifications in technology and organization and the introduction of new rules of behavior After a close examination of the history of development of the space economy and the shift from the centralized model to deregulation and the opening up of space activities to commercial companies a wide ranging overview of global space governance is provided National and regional perspectives are discussed and the current role of commercial actors in the global space system is elucidated The various challenges faced by Europe are then examined including the threat posed by institutional and market fragmentation to the emergence of European companies able to compete with companies of nations such as the USA The final part of the book analyzes proposals for reforming of the space system in Europe and offers a vision for future European space policy

Multi-Objective Optimization using Evolutionary Algorithms Kalyanmoy Deb, 2001-07-05 Evolutionary algorithms are relatively new but very powerful techniques used to find solutions to many real world search and optimization problems Many of these problems have multiple objectives which leads to the need to obtain a set of optimal solutions known as effective solutions It has been found that using evolutionary algorithms is a highly effective way of finding multiple effective solutions in a single simulation run Comprehensive coverage of this growing area of research Carefully introduces each algorithm with examples and in depth discussion Includes many applications to real world problems including engineering design and scheduling Includes discussion of advanced topics and future research Can be used as a course text or for self study Accessible to those with limited knowledge of classical multi objective optimization and evolutionary algorithms The integrated presentation of theory algorithms and examples will benefit those working and researching in the areas of optimization optimal design and evolutionary computing This text provides an excellent introduction to the use of evolutionary algorithms in multi objective optimization allowing use as a graduate course text or for self study

The Next Space Race Richard M. Harrison, Peter A. Garretson, 2023-03-31 If China's space ambitions continue unchallenged America will be seriously economically and militarily disadvantaged This book provides a comprehensive strategy to secure U S primacy in the space domain From Moon landings to plans for asteroid mining China is beginning to exploit space to achieve its great power ambitions Its strategy could over time severely and adversely impact U S economic and military security The United States needs to structure its approach to space to ensure that it can meet or surpass PRC timelines Authors Richard M Harrison and Peter A Garretson both from the American Foreign Policy Council review the literature on Chinese space ambitions and assess U S space related initiatives across the government military and private sector to understand the maturity of technology available to support space initiatives Their first hand research and findings are supplemented by interviews with industry experts corporate space leaders and government and military officials The Next Space Race describes and seeks to influence the development of American space policy to ensure the U S industrial base is ready to meet or surpass PRC milestones empower and clarify the mission of the newly minted Space Force provide guidance to NASA and other federal agencies and incentivize private sector companies to contribute to ensuring American space primacy
