Swaton,2013-11-11 The ever increasing release of harmful agents due to human activities have led in some areas of the world to heavy pollution In order to protect human health and the environment environmental standards that shall limit the release and the concentration of those toxic agents in the environment and hence the exposure to it have to be established The related assessment and decision making procedures have to be based on solid scientific data about the effects and mechanisms of these agents as well as on ethical social and economic aspects For risk evaluation the knowledge of the dose response curve is an essential prerequisite Dose responses without a threshold dose are most critical in this connection Such dose responses are assumed for mutagenic and carcinogenic effects which therefore dominate also the discussion in this book In the environmentally important low dose range risk estimation can only be achieved by extrapolation from higher doses with measurable effects The extrapolation is accompanied with uncertainties which makes risk evaluation as well as risk communication frequently problematic In order to ensure rational efficient and fair decisions beyond a sound scientific assessment the dialogue between disciplines with the affected people and with the general public is necessary In this book the whole range of relevant and essential aspects of risk evaluation and standard setting is addressed Starting with the ethical foundations the sound analysis of recent scientific findings sets the frame for further reflections by theory of cognition psychosocial sciences and jurisprudence The authors end up with concluding recommendations for coping with the recent problems of standard setting in the field of environmentally relevant low doses The book is designed to a readership of scientists legislators administrators and the interested public Monitoring Ecological Condition in the Western United States Shabeg S. Sandhu,Brian D. Melzian,Edward R. Long,Walter G. Whitford,Barbara T. Walton,2012-12-06 The monitoring of point sources by the Environmental Protection Agency EPA the states and the tribes has documented and helped reduce the levels of chemical stressors affecting our ecosystems With the controls on point sources reducing chemical contamination new environmental challenges associated with nonpoint sources have emerged To adequately deal with these new problems EPA s Office of Research and Development recognized the need to develop an overall understanding of the condition of our ecological resources the trends in their condition and the stressors affecting these systems on a broad scale Toward this end the Environmental Monitoring and Assessment Program EMAP was established by EPA and has been strategically developing the scientific tools and techniques to monitor and assess the status and trends of aquatic ecosystems EMAP scientists have developed new indicators and probability based designs to fill data gaps in the development of regional scale assessments of our aquatic resources as required in the Clean Water Act We have a scientifically defensible approach that allows 100 percent coverage of the aquatic resources within broad geographic areas and the formulation of reference conditions for establishing the health of these resources. The use of these indicators and designs were successfully demonstrated in the landscapes, streams, and estuaries of the mid-Atlantic states as part of the Mid-Atlantic Integrated Assessment (MAIA). Policy Integration for Complex Environmental Problems Helen Briassoulis, 2017-07-05. The quest for policy integration crystallized in the 1990s as awareness was growing that the current supply of narrow sectoral and little coordinated or even overlapping and conflicting policies could not cope efficiently and effectively with contemporary complex cross-cutting and interdependent socio-environmental problems. Combining and coordinating policies properly promises to address this institutional misfit, add value to policies, support planning at national and sub-national levels, and facilitate the transition to sustainable development more generally. This book proposes a comprehensive conceptualization of policy integration and negotiates pertinent theoretical, methodological, and applied issues from the perspective of selected EU policies: rural development, regional development, transport, social, economic, environmental, water resources, and biodiversity policy. Mediterranean desertification, an exceptionally complex socio-environmental problem, is used as an illustrative example as the idea for this book transpired while researching the topic of policy making to combat desertification in the context of MEDACTION, an EU-funded research project.

Dendroclimatology Malcolm K. Hughes, Thomas W. Swetnam, Henry F. Diaz, 2010-10-28. A top priority in climate research is obtaining broad extent and long-term data to support analyses of historical patterns and trends and for model development and evaluation. Along with directly measured climate data from the present and recent past, it is important to obtain estimates of long-past climate variations spanning multiple centuries and millennia. These longer time perspectives are needed for assessing the unusualness of recent climate changes as well as for providing insight on the range, variation, and overall dynamics of the climate system over time spans exceeding available records from instruments such as rain gauges and thermometers. Tree rings have become increasingly valuable in providing this long-term information because extensive data networks have been developed in temperate and boreal zones of the Earth, and quantitative methods for analyzing these data have advanced. Tree rings are among the most useful paleoclimate information sources available because they provide a high degree of chronological accuracy, high replication, and extensive spatial coverage spanning recent centuries. With the expansion and extension of tree-ring data and analytical capacity, new climatic insights from tree rings are being used in a variety of applications, including for interpretation of past changes in ecosystems and human societies. This volume presents an overview of the current state of dendroclimatology, its contributions over the last 30 years, and its future potential. The material included is useful not only to those who generate tree-ring records of past climate (dendroclimatologists) but also to users of their results (climatologists, hydrologists, ecologists, and archeologists). With the pressing climatic questions of the 21st century demanding a deeper understanding of the climate system and our impact upon it, this thoughtful volume comes at critical moment It will be of fundamental importance in not only guiding researchers but in educating scientists and the interested lay person on the both incredible power and potential pitfalls of reconstructing climate using tree ring analysis Glen M MacDonald UCLA Institute of the Environment CA USA This is an up to date treatment of all branches of tree ring science by the world s experts in the field reminding us that tree rings are the most important source of proxy data on climate change Should be read by all budding dendrochronology scientists Alan Robock Rutgers University NJ USA

Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons,1999 Environmental Crime Environmental Audit Committee,2004 The report examines the work of central and local government agencies and departments in the fight against environmental crime The Committee applauds DEFRA for its consultations on fly tipping It is important that the person who is prosecuted for fly tipping should not be the householder if someone else is responsible for the actual fly tipping Special attention must be paid to the illegal dumping of construction excavation and demolition wastes The Environment Agency must be given appropriate levels of funding and appropriate powers For example local authorities and the Agency do not have computerised access to the records of the Driving and Vehicle Licensing Agency but have to obtain this information by post The law should facilitate the investigation and prosecution of companies which pay for illegal advertising in the form of fly posting and maximum sentences for fly posting should be raised further Local authorities should ensure that best practice is always followed when dealing with litter and graffiti and should liaise with local businesses which are known sources of litter Every local authority should ensure that data on noise nuisance is regularly compiled and sent to DEFRA or the Chartered Institute of Environmental Health this will aid policy makers Spatial Navigation: Memory Mechanisms and Executive Function Interactions Thackery I.
