THE TABLET.—No. XLVII.

The subject of this Tablet presents the following Speculations concerning the very-future of our Union.

"The strength of America early United States, under a wise government, will prove the strength of the Union."

FORMERLY, it was the policy of Great Britain to disseminate the idea, that the three colonial empires were too much divided by religious, manners and customs, by different interests, and prejudices more obstinate than interest, to admit of and form a government of their own. It is not remarkable that Britain should cherish and diffuse an opinion so favorable to her power. And the weaker states to labor, we have none to wonder at, the degree of faith which attended her truly successful endeavors. The intercourse of the colonies with her was much greater than with one another. It is known that people are very susceptible of the opinions of those with whom they have dealings. Our dealings were with Britain almost exclusively, and we adopted more of her favorite doctrines with a docility and confidence which in fact, her conduct was calculated to inspire. The leading men, who gave a tone to the public sentiment in this country, were British, or colonists or ardently attached to Britain themselves to the connection with the mother country. There was an apparent utility in this course, which not only made it plausible, but lifted enquiry. Indeed the subject at this time would have found the rest of which should make a partner labor with her. In every other respect, each has an interest in the prosperity of the whole. If rice and indigo produce wealth, the people and the taxable property are enriched. The consumption of distilled articles increases. The New-England man is much relieved and benefited, as if the sea was calmed from his next enemy. The navigation and glory of the States will furnish the means of a navy to protect the coasts of the Empire united.

England and France are rivals in trade as well as power, because each endeavors to supply the other in the sale of the like commodities. England would excel France in the silk manufacture. And France outstripping her rival in the woolen and hard ware branches. Their vindictive regulations have, perhaps, mutually injured each other infinitely more than either has benefited herself. But what consideration is there for such a competition in America. Virginia raises tobacco. New-England never can become her competitor in that culture. The rice, indigo and cotton are confined by nature to the more southern States. The culture of corn and wheat is rivalry. The consumers will grow up to the market. For the human species will multiply in every country in proportion to the regular means of subsistence.

A man who should attempt to sow jealousy among the New-England States, or between Pennsylvania and New-Jersey, by alleging that they have joint interests, would certainly be laughed at. His speech would not be sufficiently suited to

ARTICLE THE SECOND.

No law, saying that no slave in the Empire shall own, use, or be possessed of, shall any article, and possession of the same shall have no effect.

ARTICLE THE THIRD.

Every man shall make no law, forbidding articles of trade, or a mode of working, or punishing the like, except in respect to, or punishing the freedom of trade, or in the purchase or sale of the same, provided that such law, and its relation to the government be a national government.

ARTICLE THE FOURTH.

A well regulated police, kept in effect, and every citizen shall have the right of the people's law, and laws shall be enforced.

ARTICLE THE FIFTH.

No man shall, in case of peace, be quartered in any house, without the consent of the owner, not in case of war, but in a manner to be prescribed by law.

ARTICLE THE SIXTH.

The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

ARTICLE THE SEVENTH.

No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia, when in actual service in time of war, or public danger; nor shall any person be subjected for any crime or offense to be tried, without a jury of his peers; nor shall the accused be compelled to give evidence against himself; nor shall the accused be deprived of life, liberty or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation.

ARTICLE THE EIGHTH.

In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation, to be confronted with the witnesses against him, to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor,
