ABSTRACT

Nigeria's Niger Delta region has abundant natural and human resources, including natural gas and crude oil, as well as diverse ecosystems and a stable population. Due to its harbors, which promote the berthing of commerce vessels, the area has the ability to boost international trade. Due to poverty and underdevelopment wreaking havoc on the environment and its people, the Niger Delta region, despite its tremendous resources, has become excessively unstable and insecure. Environmental issues that include heightened soil erosion, floods, salinization or alkalization, desertification, gas flaring, pipeline vandalism, bush burning, and pollution of water, air, and land as a result of improper land-use planning and management from the disposal of household and industrial wastes, as well as oil spills, noise pollution, the growth of informal settlements in urban areas, unsafe and unhygienic housing, and traffic congestion. With its wealth of resources, the region has been blessed and cursed, and this article explores these issues from an economic historical standpoint. For the area to experience sustainable growth and a high-quality environment, current environmental planning and management laws, rules, and standards must be upheld.

Introduction

Cities and towns situated between the Atlantic Ocean and the River Niger's coast make up Nigeria's Niger Delta area (Francis, Agomuo, & Chukwulet, 2021). Certain upland settlements have been added to these central Delta regions due to administrative and political conveniences. It is impossible to overstate how crucial the Niger Delta has been to Nigeria's socioeconomic and political development since the era of the slave trade. Aside from the fact that the residents in this area can immediately engage in their primary professions of fishing and subsistence farming due to the proximity of the River Niger and the Atlantic Ocean (Dike, 1956). For many people in the region and beyond, including Europeans, the area has served as a bustling hub for trade and economic activity (Alagosa, 1970).

European explorers and missionaries revealed the Niger Delta coast to be a bustling hub of trade. Mutual traders from Portugal were the first to settle in the region, bringing with them the European capitalism system and its economy (Dike, 1956). Beyond exchanging their European commodities for the people's raw resources at the coast, where they were confined, the Portuguese did not interfere with the trade rights of the Delta intermediaries (Ofonagoro, 1979). When the nature of the goods trade changed, the Europeans who provided the middlemen traders in the Niger Delta with weapons and material gifts encouraged widespread slave raids to meet the Europeans' demand for labor for their plantations in Sao Tome and Fernando Po (Ejinwa, 2002). This led to the middlemen traders becoming extremely corrupt. The Niger Delta developed become a haven for the harvest of slaves as the plantation economy grew throughout the New World and slave services were necessary in Europe. The area was a key supplier of African slaves to the Americas and Europe for over four centuries (Imbua, 2012).

Slave labor helped Europe and the Americas become industrialized economies as the slave trade and its slave entrepreneurs prospered. As the steady flow of slaves into the Western world proved unsustainable economically, Europe outlawed the slave trade as a criminal operation. From that point on, the trade was outlawed in the Americas as well, which were still under European dominion. Trade in palm goods, used to make soap and lubricate the machinery of the European industrial revolution, took the place of the trade in slaves. The chiefs of the area received sponsorship and encouragement to bring oil for the Europeans from their settlements in the hinterland.

Therefore, the state of the economy in Europe and the Americas dictated how well-off the people were in the Niger Delta. In order to keep the suppliers in the hinterlands submissive and loyal in their commercial dealings with the Delta intermediaries, the European traders in the area armed the native dealers as they fought for larger percentages of the legal trade (Dime, 1968). The scenario persisted until the middle of the 20th century, when the

The African Colonial State in Comparative Perspective Crawford Young, 1994-01-01 In this comprehensive and original study a distinguished specialist and scholar of African affairs argues that the current crisis in African development can be traced directly to European colonial rule which left the continent with a singularly difficult legacy that is unique in modern history Crawford Young proposes a new conception of the state weighing the different characteristics of earlier European empires including those of Holland Portugal England and Venice and distilling their common qualities He then presents a concise and wide ranging history of colonization in Africa from the era of construction through consolidation and decolonization Young argues that several qualities combined to make the European colonial experience in Africa distinctive The high number of nations competing for power around the continent and the necessity to achieve effective occupation swiftly yet make the colonies self financing drove colonial powers toward policies of ruthless extractive action The persistent virulent racism that established a distance between rulers and subjects was especially central to African colonial history Young concludes by turning his sights to other regions of the once colonized world comparing the fates of former African colonies to their counterparts elsewhere In tracing both the overarching traits and variations in African colonial states he makes a strong case that colonialism has played a critical role in shaping the fate of this troubled continent

French Mediterraneans Patricia M. E. Lorcin, Todd Shepard, 2016-05 While the Mediterranean is often considered a distinct unified space recent scholarship on the early modern history of the sea has suggested that this perspective is essentially a Western one devised from the vantage point of imperial power that historically patrolled the region's seas and controlled its ports By contrast for the peoples of its southern shores the Mediterranean was polymorphous shifting with the economic and seafaring exigencies of the moment Nonetheless by the nineteenth century the idea of a monolithic Mediterranean had either been absorbed by or imposed on the populations of the region In French Mediterraneans editors Patricia M E Lorcin and Todd Shepard offer a collection of scholarship that reveals the important French element in the nineteenth and twentieth century creation of the singular Mediterranean These essays provide a critical study of space and movement through new approaches to think about the maps migrations and margins of the sea in the French imperial and transnational context By reconceptualizing the Mediterranean this volume illuminates the diversity of connections between places and polities that rarely fit models of nation state allegiances or preordained geographies Understanding Africa's

Rural Households And Farming Systems Joyce Lewinger Moock, 2019-06-26 In this book the difficult problems of agriculture in sub Saharan Africa are examined by the farming systems approach which aims to improve food production under adverse conditions through agronomic and social science research conducted on the farm Particular attention is paid to household decision making processes that affect the way households The Starving Empire Yan Slobodkin, 2023-11-15 The Starving Empire traces the history of famine in the modern French Empire showing that hunger is intensely local and sweepingly global shaped by regional contexts and the transnational interplay of ideas and policies all at once By integrating food crises in Algeria West and Equatorial Africa and Vietnam into a broader story of imperial and transnational care Yan Slobodkin reveals how the French colonial state and an emerging international community took increasing responsibility for subsistence but ultimately failed to fulfill this responsibility Europeans once dismissed colonial famines as acts of god misfortunes of nature and the inevitable consequences of backward races living in harsh environments But as Slobodkin recounts drawing on archival research from four continents the twentieth century saw transformations in nutrition scientific racism and international humanitarianism that profoundly altered ideas of what colonialism could accomplish A new confidence in the ability to mitigate hunger coupled with new norms of moral responsibility marked a turning point in the French Empire's relationship to colonial subjects and to nature itself. Increasingly sophisticated understandings of famine as a technical problem subject to state control saddled France with untenable obligations. The Starving Empire not only illustrates how the painful history of colonial famine remains with us in our current understandings of public health, state sovereignty and international aid but also seeks to return food, this most basic of human needs, to its central place in the formation of modern political obligation and humanitarian ethics.

Christian Missionary Engagement in Central Nigeria, 1857-1891 Femi J. Kolapo, 2019-11-28 In the decades before colonial partition in Africa, the Church Missionary Society embarked on the first serious effort to evangelize in an independent Muslim state. Bishop Samuel Ajayi Crowther led an all-African field staff to convert the people of the Upper Niger and Confluence area, whose communities were threatened or already conquered by an expanding jihadist Nupe state. In this book, Femi J. Kolapo examines the significance of the mission as an African rather than European undertaking, assessing its impact on missionary practice, local engagement and Christian conversion prospects. By offering a fuller history of this overlooked mission in the history of Christianity in Nigeria, this book reaffirms indigenous agency and rethinks the mission as an experiment ahead of its time.

The African Poor John Iliffe, 1987-12-25 This history of the poor of Sub-Saharan Africa begins in the monasteries of thirteenth-century Ethiopia and ends in the South African resettlement sites of the 1980s. Its thesis, derived from histories of poverty in Europe, is that most very poor Africans have been individuals incapacitated for labour, bereft of support and unable to fend for themselves in a land-rich economy. There has emerged the distinct poverty of those excluded from access to productive resources. Natural disaster brought widespread destitution, but as a cause of mass mortality, it was almost eliminated in the colonial era to return to those areas where drought has been compounded by administrative breakdown. Professor Iliffe investigates what it was like to be poor, how the poor sought to help themselves, how their counterparts in other continents live. The poor live as people rather than merely parading as statistics. Famines have alerted the world to African poverty, but the problem itself is ancient. Its prevailing forms will not be understood until those of earlier periods are revealed and trends of change are identified. This is a book for all concerned with the future of Africa as well as for students of poverty elsewhere.

originally published in 1985      The Cambridge History of Africa J. D. Fage, Roland Anthony Oliver, G. N. Sanderson, 1975 Volume VI covers the period 1870-1905 when the European powers divided the continent into colonial territories      Credit, Currencies, and Culture Endre Stiansen, Jane I. Guyer, 1999 A striking feature of African history is the volume of commerce and production that has been possible without the full panoply of credit insurances, future markets, stock companies, limited liability, and other legal and financial services that make up the formal sector of modern economies. The contributions to this volume investigate institutional nexuses through which money has been managed in Africa. Together they present important perspectives that are needed to understand the present economic crisis on the continent      Saharan Frontiers James McDougall, Judith Scheele, 2021-12-22 Makes a compelling case for the importance of Saharan history both in its own right and in its articulations with the histories of other regions. American Ethnologist The Sahara has long been portrayed as a barrier that divides the Mediterranean world from Africa proper and isolates the countries of the Maghrib from their southern and eastern neighbors. Rather than viewing the desert as an isolating barrier, this volume takes up historian Fernand Braudel's description of the Sahara as the second face of the Mediterranean. The essays recast the history of the region with the Sahara at its center, uncovering a story of densely interdependent networks that span the desert's vast expanse. They explore the relationship between the desert's islands and shores and the connections and commonalities that unite the region. Contributors draw on extensive ethnographic and historical research to address topics such as trade and migration, local notions of place, territoriality and movement, Saharan cities, and the links among ecological, regional, and world historical approaches to understanding the Sahara. Contributions by Dida Badi, Julien Brachet, Armelle Chopin, Charles Grumont, Peregrine Horden, Olivier Leservoisier, Laurence Marfaing, E. Ann McDougall, Abderrahmane Moussaoui, Mohamed Oudada, Fatma Oussedik, and Katia Schrire. A compilation of coherent, well-structured case studies addressing highly significant issues for the contemporary Sahara, a groundbreaking study. Social Anthropology Altogether, this book is highly recommendable. Its key contribution is in teaching us to conceive of the Sahara not as a region clearly defined by natural features but as a space that exists, extends, and expands according to its vibrant human interconnectedness. Journal of the Royal Anthropological Institute      The Rise of Merchant Empires James D. Tracy, 1990 This volume examines the rise of the many different trading empires from the end of the Middle Ages to the eighteenth century.
