Bowler, 2014-10-13 First published in 1993 The broad objective of this book is to describe and explain the contemporary geography of agriculture in developed market economies The objective has been approached by a team of agricultural geographers each writer contributing an analysis of a particular topic Fearing Food Julian Morris, Roger Bate, 2012-12-02 Environmental and consumer activists have for a long time blamed pesticides fertilizers and other aspects of intensive farming for causing environmental degradation and human disease Yet as the authors in this book show intensive farming has enabled growth in food production at a rate greater than population growth thereby ensuring that people are better fed than ever before whilst simultaneously limiting the effect of farming on the environment The authors debunk numerous pervasive myths including Myth Pesticides are bad for the environment and bad for human health Fact Synthetic pesticides enable the production of large quantities of fresh fruit and vegetables which means that people are better protected against cancer In addition the synthetic pesticides themselves are often less toxic than natural pesticides Overall synthetic pesticides present a net gain in health terms Myth Antibiotic resistance in animals is spreading to humans Fact The use of antibiotics in young animals keeps meat prices low and does not materially contribute to antibiotic resistance in humans Myth Nitrate fertilizers are a threat to human health Fact Nitrate fertilizers are probably beneficial to human health Myth Genetically modified organisms GMOs are bad for the environment and bad for our health Fact Many environmental problems associated with agriculture can be reduced by using GMOs which have the potential to improve yields and quality which simultaneously reducing associated inputs such as fertilizers herbicides and pesticides Commercially produced GM foodcrops have no known impacts on human health and future GM foodcrops are likely to have health benefits enabling such things as low fat chips french fries and non allergenic peanuts Myth Instances of food poisoning would be reduced if we had more regulations Fact Instances of food poisoning in the UK may have been exacerbated by over cautious government regulation Myth Subsidies are needed to order to ensure that food and fish are produced in environmentally sound ways Fact Subsidies to fisheries and farming have caused widespread environmental degradation Myth Packaging and transporting food is environmentally unfriendly Fact Packaging enhances the shelf life of products and reduces wastage during transport Transporting food allows society to take advantage of different environmental and socio economic conditions that exist in different places Technological Change and the Rural Environment Philip Lowe, Terry Marsden, Sarah Whatmore, 2023-06-08 Originally published in 1990 this volume addresses issues surrounding global ecological changes and sustainability of present patterns of urbanisation and industrialisation The book discusses these problems and other issues such as how rural environments in many developed and developing countries have been transformed by a technological revolution Looking at a diverse range of topics from climate change to slurry pollution and the destruction of genetic resources to the risks of biotechnology this volume addresses these issues which concern the dynamics and social relations of technological change in rural areas

Production Rights in European Agriculture D. Barthelemy, J. David, 2001-05-21 Rather than simply cataloging the various interpretations of European regulations by Member States this international team examines the economic priorities the legal bases the social norms and cultural patterns which come into play presenting an analytical approach to the study of production rights in European agriculture This work traces the emergence and the economic and legal content of the different income support tools for agricultural producers collectively termed production rights and it looks at the foundations of the specific national conceptions underlying the methods of organising agricultural activity The book is intended for a varied readership farmers themselves of course but also economic legal and tax consultants experts lawyers notaries as well as students teachers and researchers It has been set out in such a way as to allow readers to move freely from one subject to another depending on whether their interest lies in economic aspects or legal developments or whether they are more concerned by certain production rights or by certain features of their own organisation The goal of the book is to enable the reader to grasp the special features and the significance of the forces which have shaped the current income support instruments for producers in the various Member States of the EU and which will unquestionably continue to influence the measures which flow from reforms to the Common Agricultural Policy in the years to come
