

Fire Engines in Colour

Arthur Ingram/Denis Bishop

Denis Bishop's strikingly attractive coloured drawings, using coloured inks to achieve exceptional brilliance, show the development of fire-fighting appliances—from the earliest hand engine to the most modern twin-engined airport appliance capable of accelerating from 0 to 55 m.p.h. in under 60 seconds, built for the hazards of the Jumbo age—in a rich variety of shapes, engine and equipment types, and colours. Arthur Ingram, an industrial Fire Protection Officer and an Editor of Motor, the commercial vehicle enthusiast's journal, has written an authoritative text giving technical details of the machines illustrated and accounts of the histories of their manufacturers, together with a general chapter on problems and parameters of fire appliance design and a glossary of fire-appliance types.

The 96 pages of full-colour illustrations and many additional text illustrations show altogether some 200 machines from Britain, the U.S.A., Western Europe, Eastern Europe and Japan. This is a unique book on a fascinating and evocative subject which will be much in demand among firemen, firemen-maquets, children and school librarians, and all general readers with a taste for beautifully illustrated books on technical-historical subjects.
