Field Procedures for Verification and Adjustment of Fire Behavior Predictions Richard C. Rothermel, George C. Rinehart, 1983 The problem of verifying predictions of fire behavior primarily rate of spread is discussed in terms of the fire situation for which predictions are made and the type of fire where data are to be collected Procedures for collecting data and performing analysis are presented for both readily accessible fires where data should be complete and for inaccessible fires where data are likely to be incomplete The material is prepared for use by field units with no requirements for special equipment or computers Procedures for selecting the most representative fuel model for overall evaluation of prediction capability and for developing calibration coefficients to improve future predictions are presented Illustrated examples from several fires are included The material is a companion publication to the fire prediction manual titled INT GTR 143 How to predict the spread and intensity of forest and range fire by R C Rothermel

General Technical Report PSW. ,1978 Wildland Fire Behaviour Mark A. Finney,Sara S. McAllister,Jason M.

Forthofer, Torben P. Grumstrup, 2021-11-01 Wildland fires have an irreplaceable role in sustaining many of our forests shrublands and grasslands They can be used as controlled burns or occur as free burning wildfires and can sometimes be dangerous and destructive to fauna human communities and natural resources Through scientific understanding of their behaviour we can develop the tools to reliably use and manage fires across landscapes in ways that are compatible with the constraints of modern society while benefiting the ecosystems The science of wildland fire is incomplete however Even the simplest fire behaviours how fast they spread how long they burn and how large they get arise from a dynamical system of physical processes interacting in unexplored ways with heterogeneous biological ecological and meteorological factors across many scales of time and space The physics of heat transfer combustion and ignition for example operate in all fires at millimetre and millisecond scales but wildfires can become conflagrations that burn for months and exceed millions of hectares Wildland Fire Behaviour Dynamics Principles and Processes examines what is known and unknown about wildfire behaviours The authors introduce fire as a dynamical system along with traditional steady state concepts They then break down the system into its primary physical components describe how they depend upon environmental factors and explore system dynamics by constructing and exercising a nonlinear model The limits of modelling and knowledge are discussed throughout but emphasised by review of large fire behaviours Advancing knowledge of fire behaviours will require a multidisciplinary approach and rely on quality measurements from experimental research as covered in the final chapters

Ecology of Wildfire Residuals in Boreal Forests Ajith Perera, Lisa Buse, 2014-07-21 Large and intense wildfires are integral to the globally important boreal forest biome While much is known about boreal wildfires the focus on forest remnants that either escape or survive these intense fires is a recent phenomenon academics now study ecological processes of wildfire residuals forest policymakers use their patterns to design harvest strategies forest managers consider their economic value and conservationists recognize their intrinsic ecological importance Ecology of Wildfire Residuals in Boreal Forests is the first book to explore ecological patterns and processes of what does not burn within boreal wildfires Following a brief introduction to the boreal forest biome it discusses the processes that form wildfire residuals how they are studied with various approaches and methods the types extent and ecological functions of wildfire residuals and their role in forest management applications all in the context of ecological scale This book is a reference for researchers and graduate students studying boreal forest ecology as well as for policymakers and forest managers It adopts a non reductionist perspective that will be of interest to scientists from conservation science forest ecology forest management and timber production Brings together fire behaviour ecological scale vegetation ecology and conservation biology to provide a cross disciplinary multi scale and an integrative discussion of forest fire residuals Captures the state of knowledge with a meta analysis of research trends during the past few decades with a comprehensive review of the literature a compilation of key references and a list of key topics relevant to the study of boreal wildfire residuals Identifies the major gaps and uncertainties in the present body of knowledge including a critique of study techniques and reporting practices to date and proposes a set of terms and definitions and a list of research questions and priorities Includes the authors observations and research experience from boreal Canada and information extracted from interactions with North American and European ecologists forest managers and conservationists
