Fires In Sprinklered Building:

Fire Flow Water Consumption in Sprinklered and Unsprinklered Buildings Code Consultants, Inc., 2013-07-18 Fire Flow Water Consumption in Sprinklered and Unsprinklered Buildings offers a detailed analysis for calculating the fire water demand required in buildings with existing and non-existent sprinkler systems. The installation of automatic sprinkler systems can significantly reduce the amount of water needed during a fire but it requires water for commissioning, inspection, testing, and maintenance. CITM This book provides an estimate of fire water used under both fire conditions including CITM to allow communities to develop fire water fees for both sprinklered and unsprinklered buildings that are proportional to the anticipated fire water usage. The types of buildings analyzed include residential family dwellings as well as those up to four stories in height, business, assembly, institutional, mercantile, and storage facilities. Water volume was studied using guidelines from the International Code Council, the National Fire Protection Association, and the Insurance Services Office. Fire Flow Water Consumption in Sprinklered and Unsprinklered Buildings is intended for practitioners as a tool for analyzing water consumption in fire situations and for providing them with key information on the best types of water systems in a variety of buildings. Researchers working in building planning and safety will also find the book valuable.

Sprinkler Experience in High-rise Buildings (1969-1979) W. Robert Powers, 1979 The growing concern for fire in high-rise buildings ten years ago prompted the New York Board of Fire Underwriters to initiate a study on the effectiveness of sprinkler protection in high-rise buildings. Based upon data collected by the New York Fire Department and the Fire Patrol, a ten-year study confirming the effectiveness of sprinkler protection unfolded. For instance, in high-rise buildings other than office buildings, 1,394 fires were recorded in the ten-year period. Of those, 875 (63 percent) were extinguished by the operation of a single sprinkler head. The next 296 (21 percent) were extinguished by the operation of two sprinkler heads. Only 23 (1.6 percent) of the total number of fires were not controlled by sprinklers. The chief failure cause being closed valves in 21 of the 23 cases. Similar data is presented on high-rise office building fires and low-rise building fires. The value of sprinklers as protection against arson is also discussed.
