Fiscal Decentralization and Local Finance in Developing Countries Roy Bahl, Richard M. Bird, 2018-03-30 This book draws on experiences in developing countries to bridge the gap between the conventional textbook treatment of fiscal decentralization and the actual practice of subnational government finance The extensive literature about the theory and practice is surveyed and longstanding problems and new questions are addressed It focuses on the key choices that must be made in decentralizing on how economic and political factors shape the choices that countries make and on how by paying more attention to the need for a more comprehensive approach and the critical connections between different components of decentralization reform everyone involved might get more for their money

Fiscal Decentralization in Developing and Transition Economies Anwar Shah, 2013 The author discusses the revolution in public sector thinking that is transforming the public sectors of developing and transition countries Countries are reconsidering their fiscal systems and searching for the right balance between central government control and decentralized governance Political decentralization has advanced in most countries Subnational expenditures in developing countries as a percentage of total public expenditures have also increased over the past two decades. However, the process is far from complete. In many countries, the central government is still involved in the delivery of local services; local governments have few sources of own revenues; local governments have limited access to borrowing for capital projects; and the design of intergovernmental transfers does neither address regional fiscal equity nor convey appropriate incentives for fiscal discipline, improved service delivery performance, and accountability to citizens. Decentralized public governance can help realign public sector incentives through greater accountability to citizens and attenuate the democracy deficit caused by globalization and the role of supranational institutions and regimes. However, this requires careful examination of the entire fiscal system. Elements of a comprehensive package of fiscal system reforms would include: a) Clarifying roles of various levels of government in public service delivery; b) Reassigning taxing responsibilities to ensure local revenue autonomy, accountability, and efficiency without endangering an internal common market; c) Designing fiscal transfers to ensure regional fiscal equity and to create an enabling environment for innovative and competitive service delivery; d) Facilitating responsible credit market access to subnational governments; e) Designing institutional arrangements for intergovernmental fiscal relations to better coordinate policies; and f) Aligning operational capacity with the authorizing environment through the accountability for results framework of public management.

Managing Fiscal Decentralization Ehtisham Ahmad, Vito Tanzi, 2002-07-18. The growth of interest in fiscal decentralization has meant that there has been something of a rush to enshrine this in policy. The World Bank has reported that about seventy countries see this as a major part of their development strategy. This book critically examines the case for decentralization. This collection of contributions comes from a workshop.

Comments on Fiscal Decentralization in Developing Countries Irini Liakopoulou, 2016. The present work deals with the fiscal decentralization reforms in developing countries. Empirical evidence demonstrates that deficiencies in the decentralization process, particularly on revenue composition issues, are many even today and of difficult solution for developing countries. Our comments are thus concentrated on what could be done now to better manage the local revenue sources of these countries.

Fiscal Decentralization and the Efficiency of Public Service Delivery Moussé Sow, Mr. Ivohasina Fizara Razafimahefa, 2015-03-17. This paper explores the impact of fiscal decentralization on the efficiency of public service delivery. It uses a stochastic frontier method to estimate time-varying efficiency coefficients and analyzes the impact of fiscal decentralization on those efficiency coefficients. The findings indicate that fiscal decentralization can improve the efficiency of public service delivery but only under specific conditions. First, the decentralization process requires adequate political and institutional environments. Second, a sufficient degree of expenditure decentralization seems necessary to obtain favorable outcomes. Third, decentralization of expenditure needs to be accompanied by sufficient decentralization of revenue. Absent those conditions fiscal decentralization can worsen the efficiency of public service delivery Fiscal Decentralization and Local Public Finance in Japan Nobuki Mochida, 2008-06-26 The intergovernmental fiscal issue is highly relevant given the worldwide movement toward more decentralized governance in both industrial and developing countries Over the course of five decades Japan has developed a robust system of decentralized governance This book investigates fiscal decentralization and local finance in Japan wi On the Measurement and Impact of Fiscal Decentralization Robert D. However the empirical studies have shown mixed results for industrialized and developing countries and some of them have demonstrated that there might be a threshold level of economic development below which decentralization is not effective. Developing and transition countries have developed a variety of forms of fiscal decentralization as a possible strategy to achieve effective and efficient governmental structures. A generalized principle of decentralization due to the country specific circumstances does not exist. Therefore decentralization has taken place in different forms in various countries at different times and even exactly the same extent of decentralization may have had different impacts under different conditions. The purpose of this study is to investigate the current state of the fiscal decentralization in Mongolia and to develop policy recommendations for the efficient and effective intergovernmental fiscal relations system for Mongolia. Within this perspective the analysis concentrates on the scope and structure of the public sector, the expenditure and revenue assignment as well as on the design of the intergovernmental transfer and sub national borrowing. The study is based on data for twenty one provinces and the capital city of Mongolia for the period from 2000 to 2009. As a former socialist country Mongolia has had a highly centralized governmental sector. The result of the analysis below revealed that the Mongolia has introduced a number of decentralization measures which followed a top down approach and were slowly implemented without any integrated decentralization strategy in the last decade. As a result Mongolia became de concentrated state with fiscal centralization. The revenue assignment is lacking a very important element for instance significant revenue autonomy given to sub national governments which is vital for the efficient service delivery at the local level. According to the current assignments of the expenditure and revenue responsibilities most of the provinces are unable to provide a certain national standard of public goods supply. Hence intergovernmental transfers from the central jurisdiction to the sub national jurisdictions play an important role for the equalization of the vertical and horizontal imbalances in Mongolia. The critical problem associated with intergovernmental transfers is that there is not a stable predictable and transparent system of transfer allocation. The amount of transfers to sub national governments is determined largely by political decisions on ad hoc basis and disregards local differences in needs and fiscal capacity. Thus a fiscal equalization system based on the fiscal needs of the provinces should be implemented. The equalization transfers will at least partly offset the regional disparities in revenues and enable the sub national governments to provide a national minimum standard of local public goods.

Examining cutting edge issues of international relevance in the ongoing redesign of the South African local government fiscal system, the contributors to this volume analyze the major changes that have taken place since the demise of apartheid. The 1996 Constitution and subsequent legislation dramatically redefined the public sector mandating the development of democratic local governments empowered to provide a wide variety of key public services. However the definition and implementation of new local functions and the supporting democratic decision making and managerial capabilities are
