

Chapter 1

THE PROBLEM AND ITS BACKGROUND

Introduction

IN ANY city in any world, drug abuse is a problem. No matter how developed or poor a country is, drug abuse is always present. Anybody can be addicted to illegal drugs, minors, people of age, even senior citizens. A vice so flexible and available is a vice difficult to quit. Illegal drugs, their trafficking and usage isn't simply a crime, but is also a social issue. Globally, drug abuse poses significant public health and societal challenges, leading to increased crime rates, strained healthcare systems, and social disintegration. In the Philippines, drug abuse has become a pervasive issue, contributing to the destabilization of communities and hindering socio-economic development.

As drug abuse has become a social problem, Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) wants to end it at the roots. Instead of always just arresting violators, Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency programs aimed at communities include drug awareness campaigns, drug prevention education in schools, community-based rehabilitation programs for drug users, and collaboration with local government units to address drug-related issues at the grassroots level. These programs aim to increase awareness about the dangers of drug abuse, prevent drug use among youth, provide support and treatment for individuals struggling with addiction, empower communities to take action against drug-related problems and educate about the harmful effects of drugs through school seminars, fun runs, online contests, and short film making.

The Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) is a special arm of the Government which aims to suppress the drug problem and eradicate the players of the drug trade, with their vision of being a professional, effective, and well-
