Interpreting FCC Broadcast Rules & Regulations Verne M. Ray, 1966 Legal Guide to FCC Broadcast Rules, Regulations, and Policies National Association of Broadcasters, 1977 Regulation of Media Ownership by the Federal Communications Commission Stanley M. Besen, Leland L. Johnson, 1984 This report assesses the state of current knowledge about the likely effects of the Federal Communications Commission's FCC's restrictions on the ownership of broadcasting stations and cable TV systems to reach judgments about the desirability of modifying or eliminating existing FCC ownership regulations It examines the evidence on the effects of group ownership of broadcast stations concentrated regional ownership common ownership of broadcast stations within a local market television station cable system cross ownership and telephone cable cross ownership The report reaches four broad conclusions 1 Concentrated broadcast station ownership leads neither to large operating efficiencies nor to anticompetitive behavior 2 there is little or no basis for the FCC's group ownership rules some support exists for rules limiting regional concentration and stronger support exists for rules that limit cross ownership within narrow geographic areas 3 there is no compelling basis for lifting the telephone cable system cross ownership ban and 4 present FCC rules and many of the proposals for their repeal or modification are often deficient because they fail to take into account actual competitive conditions NAB Legal Guide to Broadcast Law and

The Politics of Broadcast Regulation Erwin G. Krasnow, Lawrence D. Longley, 1973 The Federal Communications Commission FCC is but one party in the development of broadcast regulations it feels pressure from not only the industry and Congress but also the White House citizen groups and the courts Four major commission actions are analyzed in terms of those pressures These actions are the shift of FM from the 44 mhz range to the 98 mhz range in 1945 the development of an all channel receiver bill of 1962 as a means of aiding UHF television the abortive effort in 1963 to adopt the National Association of Broadcasters commercial limits as commission rules and the establishment in 1970 of policy to aid license renewal applicants who are faced with challenges by competing applicants a policy subsequently overturned by the courts
