Federal Deposit Insurance Reform Act of 2002 United States. Congress. House. Committee on Financial Services, 2002 Federal Deposit Insurance Reform Legislation (Including Budgetary Implications). , 2005 Two major deposit insurance reform bills are currently before Congress The Federal Deposit Insurance Reform Act of 2005 H R 1185 was initially approved by the House on May 4 2005 The Safe and Fair Deposit Insurance Act of 2005 S 1562 was reported as amended by the Committee on Banking Housing and Urban Affairs on October 18 2005 Because both bills would effectively raise assessments paid by banks and savings associations to the deposit insurance funds they contribute to the budget reconciliation process The House bill reduces net direct spending by about 200 million over five years 2.5 billion over 10 years whereas the Senate bill scores reductions of 300 million over five years 2.46 billion over 10 years As a result both bills have been attached to the budget reconciliation process S 1562 is Title II Subtitles A and B of S 1932 the Deficit Reduction Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 2005 passed by the Senate on November 3 2005 In the House H R 1185 is Title IV of H R 4241 the Deficit Reduction Act of 2005 Both deposit insurance bills as passed House and as reported Senate are identical to their respective reconciliation versions These measures culminating years of congressional attention share many provisions yet differ significantly in others Both would merge the Bank Insurance Fund BIF and the Savings Association Insurance Fund SAIF into a new Deposit Insurance Fund DIF for all depository institutions except credit unions which would continue with their own insurance fund Both would replace the designated reserve ratio with a range within which the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation FDIC would operate DIF Both would raise the 100 000 coverage limit for deposit insurance for at least some accounts Credit union coverage would change in step with banks and thrifts Both bills would allow for refunds of excess reserves to wellcapitalized banks Both bills would require the FDIC to give credit to institutions for past premium payments if the FDIC must make new assessments thus accounting for the disparity between old and newer institutions The bills differ in important respects Insurance coverage limits rise immediately for most accounts in the House bill and would be indexed for inflation automatically at five year intervals in the future The Senate bill increases coverage limits immediately for retirement accounts and allows the FDIC at its discretion to increase limits for all accounts at five year intervals in the future The House allows for both one time and ongoing credit pools against future premiums whereas the Senate allows only an initial credit The House but not the Senate would limit premiums paid by well capitalized and operated banks so long as the new insurance fund was within the reserve range This report will be updated as warranted by events
