 Puerto Rico, the largest island in the Caribbean, is a volcanic island. It is located in the northern part of the Caribbean Sea, between the Atlantic Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico. The island is 34 miles long and 35 miles wide. It is surrounded by the Puerto Rico Current, a strong ocean current that flows northward along the east coast of the island. The island is divided into two main regions: the northern region, which is hilly and mountainous, and the southern region, which is flatter and more fertile. The northern region is home to the highest peak in the Caribbean, Mount Lupeón, which is 5,041 feet high. The southern region is home to the largest city in the Caribbean, San Juan, which is located on the northern coast. The island is also home to many other cities and towns, including Ponce, Caguas, and Mayaguez. The island is a popular tourist destination, with many beautiful beaches and historic sites. The island is also a member of the Organization of American States and the Caribbean Community and Common Market.
