Information on Chemicals in Electronic Products Nardono Nimpuno, Caroline Scruggs, Nordic Council of Ministers, 2011 Many chemicals used in the electronics sector have negative consequences for human and environmental health These include chemicals such as lead mercury brominated flame retardants halogenated flame retardants polyvinyl chloride PVC and phthalates Typical electronic waste handling practices in developing countries are detrimental to the health of workers their environment and their communities There are issues associated also with formal recycling in modern facilities and the production phase is often problematic as well with electronics workers potentially being exposed to carcinogens and reproductive toxicants In addition it is becoming apparent that recycling of valuable materials must be made more efficient as the price of virgin materials metals and minerals increases and their availability decreases The problems are exacerbated by the fact that there has been a rapid increase in sales of electronics in the past several years making e waste one of the fastest growing waste streams today In order to minimise any potential risks to human or environmental health electronics stakeholders in different stages of the life cycle of electronic products need information on what chemicals are present in the products their properties use and potential risks This report studies the extent to which existing information systems meet the needs of different stakeholder groups highlights information gaps and obstacles and discusses potential solutions to optimise the flow of information on chemicals in electronics The report is carried out within the UNEP project on Chemicals in Products

Electronic Equipment Packaging Technology Gerald L. Ginsberg, 2013-11-27 The last twenty years have seen major advances in the electronics industry Perhaps the most significant aspect of these advances has been the significant role that electronic equipment plays in almost all product markets Even though electronic equipment is used in a broad base of applications many future applications have yet to be conceived This versatility of electronics has been brought about primarily by the significant advances that have been made in integrated circuit technology The electronic product user is rarely aware of the integrated circuits within the equipment However the user is often very aware of the size weight modularity maintainability aesthetics and human interface features of the product In fact these are aspects of the products that often are instrumental in determining its success or failure in the marketplace Optimizing these and other product features is the primary role of Electronic Equipment Packaging Technology As the electronics industry continues to provide products that operate faster than their predecessors in a smaller space with a reduced cost per function the role of electronic packaging technology will assume an even greater role in the development of cost effective products
