Chabot,2012-12-06 Although as W D Billings notes in his chapter in this book the development of physiological ecology can be traced back to the very beginnings of the study of ecology it is clear that the modern development of this field in North America is due in the large part to the efforts of Billings alone The foundation that Billings laid in the late 1950s came from his own studies on deserts and subsequently arctic and alpine plants and also from his enormous success in instilling enthusiasm for the field in the numerous students attracted to the plant ecology program at Duke University Billings own studies provided the model for subsequent work in this field Physiological techniques normally confined to the laboratory were brought into the field to examine processes under natural environmental conditions These field studies were accompanied by experiments under controlled conditions where the relative impact of various factors could be assessed and further where genetic as opposed to environmental influences could be separated This blending of field and laboratory approaches promoted the design of experiments which were of direct relevance to understanding the distribution and abundance of plants in nature Physiological mechanisms were studied and assessed in the context of the functioning of plants under natural conditions rather than as an end in itself A Systems Analysis of the Global Boreal Forest Herman H. Shugart,Rik Leemans,Gordon B. Bonan,2005-03-07 The world s boreal forests which lie to the south of the Arctic are considered to be the Earth s most significant terrestrial ecosystems A panel of ecologists here provide a synthesis of the important patterns and processes which occur in boreal forests and review the principal mechanisms which control the forest s patterns U.S. Tundra Biome Publication List Jerry Brown,1983 Biology Bulletin of the Academy of Sciences of the USSR. Akademii nauk SSSR.,1985 Agrindex ,1994 Förhandlingar Geologiska föreningen (Sweden),1981
