Follow A True Story:

Most of What Follows is True Michael Crummey, 2019-04-02 The prizewinning author of The Innocents examines the relationships among fact fiction fictionalization and appropriation in this thought provoking work In all creative writing the question of what is true and what is real are two very different considerations Figuring out how to dance between them is a murky business In Most of What Follows Is True Michael Crummey examines the complex relationship between fact and fiction between the real world and the stories we tell to explain it Drawing on his own experience appropriating historical characters to fictional ends he brings forward important questions about how writers use history and real life figures to animate fictional stories Is there a limit to the liberties a writer can take Is there a point at which a fictionalized history becomes a false history What responsibilities do writers have to their readers and to the historical and cultural materials they exploit as sources Crummey offers thoughtful witty views on the deep and timely conversation around appropriation

An End To Murder Colin Wilson, Damon Wilson, 2015-09-24 Creatively and intellectually there is no other species that has ever come close to equalling humanity's achievements but nor is any other species as suicidally prone to internecine conflict We are the only species on the planet whose ingrained habit of conflict constitutes the chief threat to our own survival Human history can be seen as a catalogue of cold hearted murders mindless blood feuds appalling massacres and devastating wars but with developments in forensic science and modern psychology and with raised education levels throughout the world might it soon be possible to reign in humanity's homicidal habits Falling violent crime statistics in every part of the world seem to indicate that something along those lines might indeed be happening Colin and Damon Wilson who between them have been covering the field of criminology for over fifty years offer an analysis of the overall spectrum of human violence They consider whether human beings are in reality as cruel and violent as is generally believed and they explore the possibility that humankind is on the verge of a fundamental change that we are about to become truly civilised As well as offering an overview of violence throughout our history from the first hominids to the twenty first century touching on key moments of change and also indicating where things have not changed since the Stone Age they explore the latest psychological forensic and social attempts to understand and curb modern human violence To begin with they examine questions such as Were the first humans cannibalistic Did the birth of civilisation also lead to the invention of war and slavery Priests and kings brought social stability but were they also the instigators of the first mass murders Is it in fact wealth that is the ultimate weapon They look at slavery and ancient Roman sadism but also the possibility that our own distaste for pain and cruelty is no more than a social construct They show how the humanitarian ideas of the great religious innovators all too quickly became distorted by organised religious structures The book ranges widely from fifteenth century Baron Gilles de Rais Bluebeard the first known and possibly most prolific serial killer in history to Victorian domestic murder and the invention of psychiatry and Sherlock Holmes and the invention of forensic science from the fifteenth century Taiping

Rebellion in China in which up to 36 million died to the First and Second World Wars and more recent genocides and instances of ethnic cleansing and contemporary terrorism They conclude by assessing the very real possibility that the internet and the greater freedom of information it has brought is leading gradually to a profoundly more civilised world than at any time in the past Following the Threads Douglas Selwyn,2010 Following the Threads Bringing Inquiry Research into the Classroom integrates several strands related to inquiry research Historians artists and educators are interviewed about carrying out research and teachers who regularly conduct projects expeditions and other student centered research strategies discuss their work Complete with lesson and unit suggestions and further resources this book is a tapestry of ideas for teachers woven from the work and wisdom of educators and artists who follow the threads of their own questions and their students bringing passion depth and authenticity to classroom teaching at any level Come Follow Me (Second
