With their management protesting throughout the season that their squad wasn't good enough to challenge for honours, the young 'Gunners' surprised everyone and must have given manager George Graham immense pleasure.

Arsenal took over at the top of the table early in November and held that position until February, when the excitement and pressure of cup runs proved too much for the youngsters. However a very creditable fourth place was secured in the Championship and although losing a highly controversial sixth round F.A. cup tie at home to Watford, Wembley was reached in the first ever Littlewoods cup.

An epic battle, played over three ties against arch-rivals Tottenham Hotspur in the semi-final, produced an amazing triumph for Arsenal as they trailed in all three games. Sheer enthusiasm and spirit won through but there was plenty of skill to go with this and the emergence of such exciting youngsters as David Rocastle, Niall Quinn, Tony Adams and Martin Hayes must make the future at Highbury a very exciting prospect.

A back four supplying England with three members must be sound and this consistency brought out the best in Paul Davis and Steve Williams. Sadly goalkeeper John Lukic remained on a monthly contract and was never seen to be happy with the situation but two very young prospects emerged to force their way to reckoning at the end of the season. They were the polished defender Mike Thomas and the very sharp marksmen Paul Merson (four goals in five plus two sub appearances so far!).

The Gunners' victory over Liverpool at Wembley was 'the icing on the cake' but the terraces idol Charlie Nicholas, credited in most newspapers with both goals (although one finished in the opposite side of the goal after a deflection), continually flattered to deceive; his class was obvious but his disenchantment with the long ball tactic encouraged the signing of Leicester City's hardworking Alan Smith. Another new player is Nigel Winterburn, a left-sided defender from Wimbledon, which poses a few interesting team selection permutations next season.

With Liverpool rebuilding, Everton playing under a new manager and Spurs not yet consistent, could next season see Arsenal back at the top? They certainly have the squad, the spirit and the stability.
