Food Supply In Java During War And Decolonisation 1940 195:

Food Supply in Java During War and Decolonisation, 1940-1950 Pierre van der Eng, 1994 Promises and Predicaments Alicia Schrikker, Jeroen Touwen, 2015-03-30 Indonesia's trajectory towards successful economic growth has been long and capricious. Studies of the process often focus either on the Netherlands Indies or independent Indonesia, suggesting the existence of fundamental discontinuities. The authors of the 17 essays in this book adopt a long term perspective that transcends regimes and bridges dualist economic models in order to examine what did and did not change as the country moved across the colonial/postcolonial divide and shifted from reliance on exports of primary products to a multi-centred economy. The aim is to analyse how economic development grew out of the interplay of foreign trade, new forms of entrepreneurship and the political economy. The authors deal with entrepreneurship and economic specialization within different ethnic groups, the geographical distribution of exports and resource drains from exporting regions and connections between an export economy and mass poverty. One recurring issue is the way actors from different ethnic groups occupied complementary niches, highlighting the rich variety of roles played by Asian entrepreneurs. A study of the international sugar trade shows how regime change fostered co-operation between different ethnic groups and nationalities involved with trading networks, inter-island shipping, urban public transport and the construction sector. A comparison of export earnings and population groups involved in trade before and after 1900 shows that unexpected agricultural and industrial transitions could underpin a fundamental shift in income growth with improved living standards for broad sectors of the population.

The book explores the human drama that cannot be simply explained in terms of nationalism and fascism. The totality of Indonesian society is addressed, including the politics and daily lives of peasants. War, Nationalism and Peasants Shigeru Satō (historicus), 1994 Local Administration and Agricultural Development During the Upheavals in Java in the 1940-s Evald Aspengren, 1987 Living in Java Under Japanese Occupation During World War Two Louise Koch-Lüthy, 2019 A personal account of life in the Dutch East Indies, Java, Indonesia during the second world war under Japanese occupation and the subsequent Indonesian uprising. Louise and her daughter were living in Switzerland and were summoned to Java by her husband to escape the war in Europe, only to end up under Japanese occupation. As they held Swiss nationality they escaped the Japanese prison of war camps but nonetheless survival in these extreme times required great resilience and good luck. This document sat gathering dust for years on various family bookshelves until her granddaughter Ysabelle Taylor decided to publish it in order to reach a greater audience, which she believes would have been the wishes of her grandmother.
