Making Peoples James Belich, 2002-02-28 Now in paper This immensely readable book full of drama and humor as well as scholarship is a watershed in the writing of New Zealand history In making many new assertions and challenging many historical myths it seeks to reinterpret our approach to the past Given New Zealand's small population short history and great isolation the history of the archipelago has been saddled with a reputation for mundanity According to James Belich however it is just these characteristics that make New Zealand a historian's paradise a laboratory whose isolation size and recency is an advantage in which the grand themes of world history are often played out more rapidly more separately and therefore more discernably than elsewhere The first of two planned volumes Making Peoples begins with the Polynesian settlement and its development into the Maori tribes in the eleventh century It traces the great encounter between independent Maoridom and expanding Europe from 1642 to 1916 including the foundation of the Pakeha the neo Europeans of New Zealand between the 1830s and the 1880s It describes the forging of a neo Polynesia and a neo Britain and the traumatic interaction between them The author carefully examines the myths and realities that drove the colonialization process and suggests a new living version of one of the most critical and controversial documents in New Zealand's history the Treaty of Waitangi frequently described as New Zealand's Magna Carta The construction of peoples Maori and Pakeha is a recurring theme the response of each to the great shift from extractive to sustainable economics their relationship with their Hawaikis or ancestors with each other and with myth Essential reading for anyone interested in New Zealand history and in the history of new societies in general

Tennyson's Poems R. H. Winnick, 2019-04-18 In Tennyson's Poems New Textual Parallels R H Winnick identifies more than a thousand previously unknown instances in which Tennyson phrases of two or three to as many as several words are similar or identical to those occurring in prior works by other hands discoveries aided by the proliferation of digitized texts and the related development of powerful search tools over the three decades since the most recent major edition of Tennyson's poems were published. Each of these instances may be deemed an allusion meant to be recognized as such and pointing for definable purposes to a particular antecedent text, an echo, conscious or not, deliberate or not, meant to be noticed or not, meaningful or not, or merely accidental. Unless accidental, Winnick writes these new textual parallels significantly expand our knowledge both of Tennyson's reading and of his thematic intentions and artistic technique. Coupled with the thousand plus textual parallels previously reported by Christopher Ricks and other scholars, he says they suggest that a fundamental and lifelong aspect of Tennyson's art was his habit of echoing any work ancient or modern which had the potential to enhance the resonance or deepen the meaning of his poems. The new textual parallels Winnick has identified point most often to the King James Bible and to such canonical authors as Shakespeare, Milton, Dryden, Pope, Thomson, Cowper, Shelley, Byron, and Wordsworth. But they also point to many authors rarely if ever previously cited in Tennyson editions and studies, including Michael Drayton, Richard Blackmore, Isaac Watts, Erasmus Darwin, John Ogilvie, Anna Letitia Barbauld, Letitia Elizabeth Landon, John Wilson, and with surprising frequency, Felicia Hemans. Tennyson's Poems: New Textual Parallels is thus a major new resource for Tennyson scholars and students, an indispensable adjunct to the 1987 edition of Tennyson's complete poems edited by Christopher Ricks.

A Merciless Place Emma Christopher, 2011-07-01. Since Robert Hughes' The Fatal Shore, the fate of British convicts has burned brightly in the popular imagination. Incredibly, their larger story is even more dramatic: the saga of forgotten men and women scattered to the farthest corners of the British empire, driven by the winds of the American Revolution and the currents of the African slave trade. In A Merciless Place, Emma Christopher brilliantly captures this previously unknown story of poverty, punishment, and transportation. The story begins with the American War of Independence, until which many British convicts were shipped across the Atlantic. The Revolution interrupted this flow and inspired two entrepreneurs to organize the criminals into military units to fight for the crown. The felon soldiers went to West Africa's slave trading posts; just as the war ended, these forts became the new destination for England's rapidly multiplying convicts. The move was a disaster, Christopher writes: that before the scheme was abandoned, it would have run the gamut of piracy, treachery, mutiny, starvation, poisonings, allegations of white women forced to prostitute themselves to African men, and not least, several cases of murder. To end the scandal, the British government chose a new destination as far away as possible: Australia. Christopher here captures the gritty lives of Britain's convicts, victims of London's underworld rife with brutal crime and sometimes even more brutal punishments. Equally fascinating are the portraits of Fante people of West Africa, forced to undergo dramatic changes in their role as intermediaries with Europeans in the slave trade. Here too are the aboriginal Australians coping with the transformation of their native land. They all inhabit A Merciless Place, a tour de force and historical narrative at its finest.

God, Gulliver, and Genocide Claude Julien Rawson, 2002. We are obsessed with barbarians. They are the not-us who don't speak our language or any language whom we depise, fear, invade, and kill for whom we feel compassion or admiration and an intense sexual interest whose innocence or vigour we aspire to.

Writing the Nation Cynthia Vanden Driesen, 2009 The time for new approaches to White's work is overdue Central to the present study are Edward Said's ideas about the role of the intellectual and the writer of speaking truth to power and also the importance of tracing the affiliations of a text and its embeddedness in the world This approach is not incompatible with Jung's theory of the great artist and his capacity to answer the deep seated psychic needs of his people White's work has contributed in many different ways to the writing of the nation The spiritual needs of a young nation such as Australia must also comprehend its continual urge towards self definition Explored here is one important aspect of that challenge white Australia's dealings with the indigenous people of the land tracing the significance of the Aboriginal presence in three texts selected from the oeuvre of Patrick White Voss 1957 Riders in the Chariot 1961 and A Fringe of Leaves 1976 Each of these texts interrogates European culture's denigration of the non European Other as embedded in the discourse of orientalism One central merit of White's commanding perspective is the constant close attention he pays to European hubris and to the paramount autonomy of indigenous culture There is evidence even of a project which can be articulated as a search for the possibility of white indigeneity the potential for the white settler's belonging within the land as does the indigene
