

Office of Federal Financial Management

OMB's Office of Federal Financial Management (OFFM) – headed by the OMB Controller and under the direction of the OMB Deputy Director for Management – is responsible for the financial management policy of the Federal Government. OFFM's specific responsibilities include implementing the financial management improvement priorities of the President, establishing government-wide financial management policies of executive agencies, and carrying out the financial management functions of the CFO Act. In short, the mission of OFFM is to promote and support first class first class financial management in the executive branch of the Federal Government.

This past fiscal year, OFFM restructured itself to better address financial management issues, adding subject matter experts to provide leadership across its areas of responsibilities. Now, OFFM is comprised of three separate issues-oriented branches with the following objectives:

Financial Standards and Grants Branch – to develop financial management policies for Federal agencies and grant recipients; facilitate the development of timely, accurate and useful financial information to support management decisions; and ensure accountability and effective customer service for Federal grants programs.

Financial Integrity and Analysis Branch – to ensure that Federal financial programs are measuring and achieving intended results, eliminating inefficiencies and improprieties, and managing their financial activities in accordance with superior practices.

Federal Financial Systems Branch – to ensure that the government-wide Federal financial management systems architecture is producing the information needed to support first class financial management.

Each OFFM branch works directly with agency Chief Financial Officers (CFOs) and Inspectors General (IGs), as well as the CFO Council, to provide guidance to agencies in relevant areas of financial management.
