Back Lot Maurice Rapf, 1999 Son of pioneer movie producer Harry Rapf Maurice

Rapf grew up in Hollywood in that city's golden age. After moving from independent filmmaking to Warner Bros in 1924, the senior Rapf joined Louis Mayer and became one of the founding members of MGM. Hence movies were a huge influence in Maurice Rapf's early life. After graduating from college, Rapf worked as a screenwriter for major Hollywood studios but in 1947 he left Hollywood never to work for a major studio again. On numerous occasions he was called before the House Un-American Activities Committee as an alleged communist, although he never made a public confession or denial. As a result, he was blacklisted from the industry and forced to begin a new career in the East. He eventually became a movie critic and film studies professor. Maurice Rapf knows movies and the movie business as an insider from first-hand experience, not from books. His autobiography is the story of one person's interaction with an evolving Hollywood. Rapf witnessed the historical progression of movie production from silents to sound, from a fun-loving frontier community to a huge and fiercely competitive industry, from an apolitical never-never land to a community very much aware of and nervous about its social responsibility in a period of economic depression and in a period of world peace seriously threatened by the aggression of fascism. Of interest to students and teachers of film studies, of American history, and of American popular culture, as well as anyone who loves movies.

Confessions of a Hollywood Director Richard L. Bare, 2001. The excitement then continues as Bare takes us through the highs and lows of his life and career, always with humor. BOOK JACKET

Actors on Red Alert Anthony Slide, 1999. The anti-Communist hysteria that began in the 1930s was further empowered in 1938 when the House of Representatives established the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Soon thereafter, the creation of the blacklist in the late 1940s brought the Hollywood film and television community into the fold. Provocatively capturing the controversy and sentiments surrounding this period of political imbalance, Actors on Red Alert explores the repercussions of the blacklist through career interviews with five prominent actors and actresses.

Designing for the Movies Laurence Irving, 2005. Irving's time in Hollywood marked the end of the silent film years, and these memoirs depict the effect on the industry with astute and penetrating portraits of those who felt the change dramatically. Anyone with even the slightest interest in the history of filmmaking and its early characters will not want to miss this insightful account. BOOK JACKET

Rungs on a Ladder Christopher Neame, 2003-06-24. Rungs on a Ladder looks at part of the movie industry from a unique perspective. Christopher Neame, son of director Ronald Neame, started his career in the early 1960s at the very bottom but determinedly made his way to the top. Neame fondly recalls his learning years at Bray Studios and beyond. Simply and often amusingly, he recounts his days with Hammer Films and observes many of the characters both in front of and behind the camera, names synonymous with those classic tales of Gothic horror: director Terence Fisher, producers Anthony Hinds, Michael Carreras, and Anthony Nelson Keys, screenwriter-producer Jimmy Sangster, and of course Peter Cushing and Christopher Lee. Along the way, he encounters those less obviously connected to Hammer, like Joan Fontaine, Joseph Cotten, Norman Lloyd, and Bette Davis. Never the one to reserve his critical eye for others alone, Neame willingly says mea culpa when deserved. The book begins with his rude awakening to the string and sealing wax world of Dracula Prince of Darkness and follows his journey through sixteen subsequent productions including three Frankensteins The Devil Rides Out which American distributors thought was going to be a Western and a couple of Mummy films Neame also shares stories of his participation in non genre ventures like Quatermass and the Pit The Anniversary Demons of the Mind and Fear in the Night Includes 16 pages of photos
