Elephant veteran scientific writer Dale Peterson has collected thirty three essential writings about elephants from across history with geographical perspectives ranging from Africa and Southeast Asia to Europe and the United States An introductory headnote for each selection provides additional context and insights from Peterson s substantial knowledge of elephants and natural history The first section of the anthology Cultural and Classical Elephants explores the earliest mentions of elephants in African mythology Hindu theology and Aristotle and other ancient Greek texts Colonial and Industrial Elephants finds elephants in the crosshairs of colonial exploitation in accounts pulled from memoirs commoditizing African elephants as a source of ivory novel targets for bloodsport and occasional export for circuses and zoos Working and Performing Elephants gives firsthand accounts of the often cruel training methods and treatment inflicted on elephants to achieve submission and obedience As elephants became an object of scientific curiosity in the mid twentieth century wildlife biologists explored elephant families and kinship behaviors around sex and love language and self awareness and enhanced communications with sound and smell The pieces featured in Scientific and Social Elephants give readers a glimpse into major discoveries in elephant behaviors Endangered Elephants points to the future of the elephant whose numbers continue to be ravaged by ivory poachers Peterson concludes with a section on fictional and literary elephants and ends on a hopeful note with the 1967 essay Dear Elephant Sir which argues for the moral imperative to save elephants as an act of redemption for their systematic abuse and mistreatment at human hands Essential to understanding the history and experience of this beloved and misunderstood creature Thirty Three Ways of Looking at an Elephant is a must for any elephant lover or armchair environmentalist

Death and Compassion Dan Wylie, 2018-10-01 Traces the literary history of the elephant and its role in South Africa s cultural imaginary Elephants are in dire straits again They were virtually extirpated from much of Africa by European hunters in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries but their numbers resurged for a while in the heyday of late colonial conservation efforts in the twentieth Now according to one estimate an elephant is being killed every 15 minutes This is at the same time that the reasons for being especially compassionate and protective towards elephants are now so well known that they have become almost a cliché their high intelligence rich emotional lives including a capacity for mourning caring matriarchal societal structures that strangely charismatic grace Saving elephants is one of the iconic conservation struggles of our time As a society we must aspire to understand how and why people develop compassion or fail to do so and what stories we tell ourselves about animals that reveal the relationship between ourselves and animals This book is the first study to probe the primary features and possible effects of some major literary genres as they pertain to elephants south of the Zambezi over three centuries indigenous forms early European travelogues hunting accounts novels game ranger memoirs scientists accounts and poems It examines what these literatures imply about the various and diverse attitudes towards elephants about who shows compassion towards them in what ways and why It is the story of a developing contestation between death and compassion between those who kill and those who love and protect

Heart of Dryness James G. Workman, 2009-08-11 We don't govern water Water governs us writes James Workman In Heart of Dryness he chronicles the memorable cautionary tale of the famed Bushmen of the Kalahari remnants of one of the world's most successful civilizations today at the exact epicenter of Africa's drought and their remarkable widely publicized battle over water with the government of Botswana to explore the larger story of what many feel is becoming the primary resource battleground of the 21st century water The Bushmen's story may well prefigure our own Even the most upbeat optimists concede the U.S. now faces an unprecedented water crisis Large dams on the Colorado River which serve 30 million in 7 states will be dry in 13 years Southeast drought cut Tennessee Valley Authority hydropower in half exposed Lake Okeechobee's floor dried 787 million of Georgia's crops and left Atlanta with 60 days of water Cities east and west are drying up As reservoirs and aquifers fail officials ration water neighbors snitch on one another corporations move in and states fight states to control shared rivers Each year inadequate water kills more humans than AIDS malaria and all wars combined Global leaders pray for rain Bushmen tap more pragmatic solutions James Workman illuminates the present and coming tensions we will all face over water and shows how from the remoteness of the Kalahari a primitive by our standards people is showing the world a viable path through the encroaching desert of the coming Dry Age

Whales and Elephants in International Conservation Law and Politics Ed Couzens, 2013-11-07 Whales and elephants are iconic giants of the marine and terrestrial animal world Both are conspicuous representatives of wildlife conservation The issues of whaling and the ivory trade are closely linked both legally and politically in many ways some obvious and some surprising The treatment of both whales and elephants will be politically and legally contentious for years to come and is of great significance to conservation in general This book examines the current state of international environmental law and wildlife conservation through a comparative analysis of the treatment of whales and elephants In particular it describes the separate histories of international governance of both whales and elephants presenting the various treaties through which conservation has been implemented It is shown that international environmental law is influenced and shaped by important political actors many with opposing views on how best conservation and sustainable development principles are to be implemented Modern environmental treaties are changing as weaknesses and loopholes are exposed in older and possibly outdated treaties such as the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora CITES and the International Convention for the Regulation of Whaling ICRW Such weaknesses can be seen in the efforts made by some states to circumvent or weaken CITES and the International Whaling Commission and to resume commercial whaling and further in the efforts of countries to resume trade in ivory The argument is made that the Convention on Biological Diversity could be used to begin reconciling opposed views and to focus conservation efforts The argument is made that effective conservation of species cannot be achieved through individual treaties but only through a synergistic approach involving multilateral environmental agreements ecosystems of legal instruments
