

Educational Policy Analysis Debates and New Learning Technologies in England

INTRODUCTION

New education policies and reforms have always encouraged analysts to scrutinise their effects and implications on education and training provisions. However, there has never been an agreement among different "factions" of analysts on which policy analysis framework(s) should be applied. The primary purpose of this article is to analyse educational policy in conjunction with a strategy for new technologies in education in England and draw some lesson for a wider context. To this end the process of the first major new technology policy on Further Education (FE), "Networking Lifelong Learning: An Information and Learning Technology Development Strategy for FE" (ILTSFE), Further Education Funding Council (FEFC) (1999a) has been examined.

To put the discussion in context, a synopsis of the major debates on educational policy analysis, particularly between the Pluralists and the Marxists are assessed. The main perspectives of educational policy analysis are explored to substantiate an argument that multiple perspectives should be applied in education policy analysis. A "policy spiral" model of education/new technologies is proposed as an alternative to the "policy cycle" framework, introduced by Ball (1990).

BACKGROUND

Governments around the world have acknowledged the necessity to plan strategically to exploit the social, economic and personal benefits of new technologies within a context of global competitiveness and continuous change. Selwyn (2011, p. 55) observes that following the publication of the Clinton-Gore administration's National Information Infrastructure in 1993, governments across the globe passed legislation to augment technological resources – hardware, software, network and training support. The UK National Grid for Learning, German Schulen ans Netz, and the Singaporean ICT Masterplan are examples of early policies drives. He summarises:

...[C]ountries such as the UK and US saw the launch and re-launch of often indistinguishable national educational technology policies and local initiatives throughout 1980s... [From the mid 1990s] onwards the field of educational technology [...] has attracted the sustained attention of policy-makers, figuring ever more prominently in the education policy agendas of countries around the world.

Selwyn (2011) concludes that now nearly every country in the world has made and implemented an educational technology policy.

The last UK Labour Government took various separate policy initiatives such as ILTSFE on new technology in education, particularly FE. From around year 2005, the Government attempted to coordinate its policy by linking different education, ICT and social reform policies to improve educational access, quality and widen participation to those social groups traditionally excluded from learning. The Government invested hugely in these initiatives. The current analysis concentrates on ILTSFE for its historical significance.

Debates on Educational Policy Analysis

Educational reforms have provided educational researchers with the opportunity to study changes and examine theoretical perspectives and methodological approaches to policy research. These studies debate the educational policy analysis perspectives held by the Pluralists and the Marxists who have particularly differing approaches to the role of the State in education policy and its reforms (Ranson, 1995). The Pluralists view is

Educational Policy Analysis Structure And Justification:

Comparative Studies in Educational Policy Analysis Timothy Reagan, 2013-04-01 This book has a pedagogical goal in mind it is not a scholarly work so much as an applied text informed by scholarship and research The book's goal is to provide individuals who are teaching courses in comparative and international education educational administration educational policy and politics of education with a supplementary text that can be used to help their students develop skills in policy analysis evaluation and development As is explained in the book the problem that we face with respect to having students engage in hands on study of particular cases is that by focusing on real cases students are faced with either virtually unlimited data or insufficient data or indeed paradoxically with both problems In addition students come to such cases with all sorts of preconceptions that can cloud judgment in a host of ways By making use of fictitious case studies though we can carefully limit the amount of data with which students need to deal and we can also minimize the challenges presented by the baggage that students might bring with them about particular real nations

In Defence of Open-Mindedness William Hare, 1985-06-01 William Hare believes that open mindedness the disposition to form a belief and if necessary to revise or reject it in the light of available evidence and argument stands in need of a defence because it is under widespread attack In this sequel to his highly regarded Open mindedness and Education 1979 he examines the numerous ways in which opposition to open mindedness is expressed and shows how these criticisms can be countered He argues that the general indictment of open mindedness as a habit of mind leading to nihilism and scepticism as well as to neglect of the emotions is based upon a misunderstanding of the nature of the concept which in his opinion is by no means incompatible with personal commitment and confidence Similar confusions are exposed in such areas as elementary schooling moral education educational standards methods of teaching the administration of schools and the teaching of science In each of these areas examples are taken from the writings of influential critics to illustrate the nature of the doubts concerning open mindedness doubts that are carefully analysed and show to rest ultimately upon erroneous assumptions And since he believes that many who set out to champion open mindedness manage to confuse this ideal with other notions Hare undertakes in a concluding chapter to protect the ideal from its would be friends and supporters
