At the End of an Age John Lukacs, 2003-09-10 At the End of an Age is a deeply informed and rewarding reflection on the nature of historical and scientific knowledge. Of extraordinary philosophical, religious, and historical scope, it is the product of a great historian's lifetime of thought on the subject of his discipline and the human condition. While running counter to most of the accepted ideas and doctrines of our time, it offers a compelling framework for understanding history, science, and man's capacity for self-knowledge. In this work, John Lukacs describes how we in the Western world have now been living through the ending of an entire historical age that began in Western Europe about five hundred years ago. Unlike people during the ending of the Middle Ages or the Roman empire, we can know where we are. But how and what is it that we know? In John Lukacs's view, there is no science apart from scientists, and all of science, including our view of the universe, is a human creation imagined and defined by fallible human beings in a historical continuum. This radical and reactionary assertion, in its way a summa of the author's thinking expressed here and there in many of his previous twenty odd books, leads to his fundamental assertion that, contrary to all existing cosmological doctrines and theories, it is this earth which is the very center of the universe, the only universe we know and can know.

Invisible Criticism Alan Nadel, 1988. Paper reissue of the 1972 edition. Crane argues that the social institution responsible for the growth of scientific knowledge is the small group of highly productive scientists who, sharing the same field of study, set priorities for research, recruit and train students, communicate with one another, and thus monitor the rapidly changing structure of knowledge in their field. First published hardcover in 1988, Nadel exposes some of the ways Ellison situates Invisible Man in regard to the American literary tradition, comments on that tradition, and in doing so, alters it.

The West Wing first broadcast in 1999 is thought by many to have been one of the most significant dramas shown on network television. Despite its overly idealized depiction of American political life and blatant contradictions in the way we consider America its values its aspirations and its behavior in the world, The West Wing nonetheless succeeds in attaining popular national and international aesthetic appeal. This book aspires to explain the appeal of the show by considering issues such as race religion sexuality disability and education from both a practical and theoretical perspective through the lenses of feminism gender theory Marxism psychoanalytical theories structuralism poststructuralism postcolonialism and more. It seeks to offer informative and revealing readings of one of the most significant television productions of recent times. The Modern Divine Comedy Book 7: Paradiso 1 Entry Andrew J. A Day Bee Snow, 2023-10-23. About the Book: What about autism ADHD ODD and all the rest? What does it mean? Why now? This book turns autism inside out and examines the subject under the microscope of personal experience. Ever wonder what it's like to be different? Not to fit in? To wonder at the world around you while trying to understand it? Do you try to conform to society's norms? To fit in? Or do you embrace your differences and accept yourself just the way you are? A Day is an examination of the autism experience from within the autism world. It's a philosophical and perhaps whimsical examination of the subject not so much in prose but as an artistic illustration in the graphic novel genre. Can you follow it? Do you want to see the world in an entirely different way? Can you imagine what the world looks like from an autistic point of view How did we get here and where are we going next The answers may surprise you About the Author Bee Snow s artistic ability was first noticed by her parents when she was drawing recognizable figures in an artsy way at two years of age When she was evaluated for entry into kindergarten private school officials mistook her advanced artistic ability for academic readiness resulting in her placement in first grade rather than kindergarten The formal classroom environment and academics proved to be difficult for her and when she told her parents she wasn t looking forward to second grade because first grade had been so hard her mother a former public school teacher decided to homeschool her She was homeschooled through sixth grade then attended public school through graduation from high school She always felt herself to be an outsider in a high school of 3 000 students and never felt she fit in But she won more local state and national art competitions in high school than any other student in school history She won the senior art award in both her junior and senior year of high school Snow graduated from Indiana State University with honors majoring in fine art with an emphasis in drawing Her work was chosen for special honor in a senior art display on campus where her drawings paintings sculptures pottery woodwork and multimedia pieces were recognized One professor remarked of her achievement in various media Is there anything you can t do Snow is married the mother of four teenagers and teaches art in a private school She lives on a farm in rural Indiana
