Abstract

The purpose of the conceptual framework is to demonstrate how an integrative approach can help explain effective performance management in the public sector using the mediating role of public service motivation and transformational leadership. To help achieve the objective of the paper, a systematic review of the literature on both organisational and environmental factors which are perceived as drivers of an effective performance management was selectively done. The analysis of these variables led to the development of the conceptual framework. The results of the review indicate that an effective performance management in the public sector depends on how public service motivation and transformational leadership mediate the relationship between organisational and environmental factors. The integrative approach to effective performance management explored non-rational variables that can improve performance management policies.

1. Introduction

Effective performance management is a set of managerial performance improvement reforms which are adopted to achieve the overall organisational goals and strategy. It also involves the managing of individual and organisational performance (Armstrong, 2009; Furnham, 2004; Lee, 2005). More specifically, effective performance management may be a developmental tool for building the capacities and competencies of individual employees to improve task performance (Rice, 2007).

After the use of the term 'performance management' by Beer and Ruh in 1976, there has been a large volume of research on the subject, especially in private sector organisations to explain why successful firms have increased their asset value and their profits margins than less successful firms (Biron, Farndale, & Pasmwe, 2011). However, the evolution of performance management systems in the public sector in the 1980s was due to the emergence of the new public management (NPM) and the reinventing government doctrines (Denhardt & Catlaw, 2015). These two doctrines though similar, brought in the managerial philosophies of the private sector into the management of public organisations (Dreveton, 2013; Hood & Peters, 2004; Kelly, Doyle, & O'Donoghue, 2015; National Performance Management Advisory Commission, 2010; Williams, Rayner, & Allinson, 2012). Therefore, NPM opened the debate on whether private ethos could be used to improve service delivery in public organisations (Walle & Hammerschmid, 2011). Since then, there have been attempts to develop conceptual frameworks to explain its effectiveness in the management and organisation literature (Ferreira & Otley, 2009; Kennerley & Neely, 2002; Lee, 2005; Otley, 1999). Yet these frameworks provide little guidance for empirical research on how non-rational theories could contribute to the debate. Likewise, research on performance management has mostly looked at its effectiveness in improving policy goals (Newcomer & Caudle, 2011; Spekklé & Vorbeeten, 2014), performance information use (Moynihan, Pandey & Wright, 2012a; Kroll & Vogel, 2013), performance measurements (Ammons & Roenigk, 2015; De Lancer Julnes, 2006; Yang & Hsieh, 2007) and drivers (Ittner, Larcker, & Randall, 2003; Kroll, 2016; Liang & Nan, 2014). Clearly, previous studies have concentrated more on rationality and economic efficiency by looking at accountability factors and principal-agent explanations to study the rational decision-making processes in the public sector as a way of checking the self-interest behaviour of public managers (Kroll & Vogel, 2013; Moynihan et al., 2012a; Wright, Moynihan, & Pandey, 2012; Ter Bogt, 2008). And downplaying the role that non-choice behaviour of employees may affect organisational outcomes (Grant, 2012).

Even though non-rational theories may contribute to explain the complexity of the performance doctrine, there is little attempts to explore the non-rational actions of the agent which are considered as altruistic and self-sacrificing (Caillier, 2014). These motives are central to organisational performance because they are not subject to rational processes but grounded in public service motivation and transformational leadership style (Wright et al., 2012). To this day, there are few studies that have explored the relationship between performance management and public service motivation (PSM) which form the core motives of public managers other than external rewards (Kroll & Vogel, 2013; Moynihan & Pandey, 2010; Moynihan et al., 2012a). Despite the substantial evidence provided by these studies on performance information use, there is little if any conceptual
