Fairbairn's Object Relations Theory in the Clinical Setting David P. Celani, 2010 W R D Fairbairn 1889 1964 challenged the dominance of Freud's drive theory with a psychoanalytic theory based on the internalization of human relationships. Fairbairn assumed that the unconscious develops in childhood and contains dissociated memories of parental neglect, insensitivity and outright abuse that are impossible for the children to tolerate consciously. In Fairbairn's model, these dissociated memories protect developing children from recognizing how badly they are being treated and allow them to remain attached even to physically abusive parents. Attachment is paramount in Fairbairn's model as he recognized that children are absolutely and unconditionally dependent on their parents. Kidnapped children who remain attached to their abusive captors despite opportunities to escape illustrate this intense dependency even into adolescence. At the heart of Fairbairn's model is a structural theory that organizes actual relational events into three self and object pairs: one conscious pair, the central ego which relates exclusively to the ideal object in the external world; and two mostly unconscious pairs, the child's antilibidinal ego which relates exclusively to the rejecting parts of the object, and the child's libidinal ego which relates exclusively to the exciting parts of the object. The two dissociated self and object pairs remain in the unconscious but can emerge and suddenly take over the individual's central ego. When they emerge, the other is misperceived as either an exciting or a rejecting object, thus turning these internal structures into a source of transferences and reenactments. Fairbairn's central defense mechanism, splitting, is the fast shift from central ego dominance to either the libidinal ego or the antilibidinal ego, a near perfect model of the borderline personality disorder. In this book, David Celani reviews Fairbairn's five foundational papers and outlines their application in the clinical setting. He discusses the four unconscious structures and offers the clinician concrete suggestions on how to recognize and respond to them effectively in the heat of the clinical interview. Incorporating decades of experience into his analysis, Celani emphasizes the internalization of the therapist as a new good object and devotes entire sections to the treatment of histrionic, obsessive and borderline personality disorders.

Object Relations Theory and Practice David E. Scharff, 1996. Object relations theory has caused a fundamental reorientation of psychodynamic thought. In Object Relations Theory and Practice, Dr David E Scharff acclimates readers to the language and culture of this therapeutic perspective and provides carefully selected excerpts from seminal theorists as well as explanations of their thinking and clinical experience. He offers readers an unparalleled resource for understanding object relations psychotherapy and theory and applying it to the practice of psychotherapy and psychoanalysis. The book's sequence establishes the centrality of relationships in this theory, the internalization of experience with parents, splitting, projective identification, the role of the relationship between mother and young child in development, and transference and countertransference in the therapeutic action of psychoanalysis and psychotherapy. This book will introduce students to the basics, to the widening scope of object relations theory and to its application to psychoanalysis and individual, group and family psychotherapy. The Dissociative Mind Elizabeth F. Howell, 2013-05-13 Drawing on the pioneering work of Janet Freud Sullivan and Fairbairn and making extensive use of recent literature Elizabeth Howell develops a comprehensive model of the dissociative mind. Dissociation for her suffuses everyday life it is a relationally structured survival strategy that arises out of the mind's need to allow interaction with frightening but still urgently needed others. For therapists dissociated self states are among the everyday fare of clinical work and gain expression in dreams projective identifications and enactments. Pathological dissociation on the other hand results when the psyche is overwhelmed by trauma and signals the collapse of relationality and an addictive clinging to dissociative solutions. Howell examines the relationship of segregated models of attachment disorganized attachment mentalization and defensive exclusion to dissociative processes in general and to particular kinds of dissociative solutions. Enactments are reframed as unconscious procedural ways of being with others that often result in segregated systems of attachment. Clinical phenomena associated with splitting are assigned to a model of attachment based dissociation in which alternating dissociated self states develop along an axis of relational trauma. Later chapters of the book examine dissociation in relation to pathological narcissism the creation and reproduction of gender and psychopathy. Elegant in conception thoughtful in tone broad and deep in clinical applications Howell takes the reader from neurophysiology to attachment theory to the clinical remediation of trauma states to the reality of evil. It provides a masterful overview of a literature that extends forward to the writings of Bromberg Stern Ryle and others. The capstone of contemporary understandings of dissociation in relation to development and psychopathology. The Dissociative Mind will be an adventure and an education for its many clinical readers.
