knowledge are the chief currencies of the modern age and can also be a strategic resource and a lifeline for sustainable development Yet in Africa millions of people have never made a telephone call The technological gulf between developed and developing countries DCs is likely to widen further with the rapid expansion of the internet and the speedy transition to digitalisation in the West The impacts on DCs may include an increase in the so called brain drain and growing dependence on foreign aid of a different kind knowledge aid There are fears that knowledge imperialism is already with us What is clear is that most of the technological innovations in ICTs are Western designed and fail to address the needs of the most disadvantaged The interest of industrialised countries in the use of ICTs in DCs has largely been more concerned with the profitability of their own business enterprises than with any broader goals concerning the development of the host countries DCs face the challenge of either becoming an integral part of the knowledge based global economy or the very real danger of finding themselves on the wrong side of the digital divide Successful management in the new millennium requires developing new methods and approaches to meet the challenges and opportunities of this information revolution while at the same time fostering sustainable development Adopting a holistic approach this book aims to critically examine the interrelationship between these different issues in order to reach solutions and a consensus for a better future taking into account a variety of international institutional and intellectual perspectives It uses case and country studies in technological innovation and experience so that lessons in effective management of ICTs can be learned from successful initiatives ideas and innovations
