Effective Participatory Practice Marie Connolly, Margaret McKenzie, 1998-12-31 In recent years there has been a developing trend toward involving family in the processes of child protection decision making In 1989 New Zealand introduced new children and young persons legislation that formalized this trend in the child care and protection area central to the operation of this legislation is the Family Group Conference The model based on traditional indigenous decision making practices has revolutionized social work with children and families and provides the opportunity for family including extended family to actively participate in matters concerning children and young persons While family group conferences have been developed in New Zealand the principles of family decision making in child protection work are of wide current interest and are increasingly utilized in practice developments internationally experience indicates however that developing innovative policy and legislating for intervention processes is only part of what is required for good practice Practice inevitably needs to be strongly located within a sound theoretical framework The purpose of this volume is to provide the first theoretical and practice analysis of using family group The book explores the central requirements of professional practice in the achievements of positive outcomes for children and families and offers a conceptual framework designed to provide multiple pathways for achieving participatory practice A distinguishing feature of the book is that it develops a model of family decision making effective participatory practice EPP that critically considers the family group conference process and the linking of models of empowerment family participation and partnerships in child protection

Restorative Justice and Family Violence Heather Strang, John

Braithwaite, 2002-07-08 This 2002 book addresses one of the most controversial topics in restorative justice its potential for dealing with conflicts within families Most restorative justice programs specifically exclude family violence as an appropriate offence to be dealt with this way This book focuses on the issues in family violence that may warrant special caution about restorative justice in particular feminist and indigenous concerns At the same time it looks for ways of designing a place for restorative interventions that respond to these concerns Further it asks whether there are ways that restorative processes can contribute to reducing and preventing family violence to healing its survivors and to confronting the wellsprings of this violence The book discusses the shortcomings of the present criminal justice response to family violence It suggests that these shortcomings require us to explore other ways of addressing this apparently intractable problem
