The Historians' History of the World Vol.1 (of 25) (Illustrations) Henry Smith Williams, A complete world history should properly speaking begin with the creation of the world as man's habitat and should trace every step of human progress from the time when man first appeared on the globe. Unfortunately, the knowledge of today does not permit us to follow this theoretical obligation. We now know that the gaps in the history of human evolution as accessible to us today vastly exceed the recorded chapters that in short the period with which history proper has at present to content itself is a mere moment in comparison with the vast reaches of time which in recognition of our ignorance we term prehistoric. But this recognition of limitations of our knowledge is a quite recent growth, no older indeed than a half century. Prior to 1859 the people of Christendom rested secure in the supposition that the chronology of man's history was fully known from the very year of his creation. One has but to turn to the first chapter of Genesis to find in the margin the date 4004 B.C. recorded with all confidence as the year of man's first appearance on the globe. One finds there too a brief but comprehensive account of the manner of his appearance as well as of the creation of the earth itself, his abiding place. Until about half a century ago, as has just been said, the peoples of our portion of the globe rested secure in the supposition that this record and this date were a part of our definite knowledge of man's history. Therefore one finds the writers of general histories of the earlier days of the nineteenth century beginning their accounts with the creation of man B.C. 4004 and coming on down to date with a full and seemingly secure chronology. Our knowledge of the world and of man's history has come on by leaps and bounds since then, with the curious result that today no one thinks of making any reference to the exact date of the beginnings of human history, unless indeed it be to remark that it probably reaches back some hundreds of thousands of years. The historian can speak of dates anterior to 4004 B.C. to be sure. The Egyptologist is disposed to date the building of the Pyramids a full thousand years earlier than that. And the Assyriologist is learning to speak of the state of civilisation in Chaldea some 6000 or 7000 years B.C. with a certain measure of confidence. But he no longer thinks of these dates as standing anywhere near the beginning of history. He knows that man in that age, in the centres of progress, had attained a high stage of civilisation, and he feels sure that there were some thousands of centuries of earlier time during which man was slowly climbing through savagery and barbarism, of which we have only the most fragmentary record He does not pretend to know anything except by inference of the dawns of civilisation Whichever way he turns in the centres of progress such as China Egypt Chaldea India he finds the earliest accessible records covering at best a period of only eight or ten thousand years giving evidence of a civilisation already far advanced Of the exact origin of any one of the civilisations with which he deals he knows absolutely nothing The Creation of Man with its fixed chronology is a chapter that has vanished from our modern histories To be continue in this ebook Ancient Egypt: The Light of the World (12 volumes in 1) Gerald Massey,1907 Esoteric Egypt J. A History of the Laws of War: Volume 3 Alexander Gillespie, 2011-10-07 This unique work of reference traces the origins of the modern laws of warfare from the earliest times to the present day Relying on written records from as far back as 2400 BCE and using sources ranging from the Bible to Security Council Resolutions the author pieces together the history of a subject which is almost as old as civilisation itself The author shows that as long as humanity has been waging wars it has also been trying to find ways of legitimising different forms of combatants and ascribing rules to them protecting civilians who are either inadvertently or intentionally caught up between them and controlling the use of particular classes of weapons that may be used in times of conflict Thus it is that this work is divided into three substantial parts Volume 1 on the laws affecting combatants and captives Volume 2 on civilians and Volume 3 on the law of arms control This third volume deals with the question of the control of weaponry from the Bronze Age to the Nuclear Age In doing so it divides into two parts namely conventional weapons and Weapons of Mass Destruction The examination of the history of arms control of conventional weapons begins with the control of weaponry so that one side could achieve a military advantage over another This pattern which only began to change centuries after the advent of gunpowder was later supplemented by ideals to control types of conventional weapons because their impacts upon opposing combatants were inhumane By the late twentieth century the concerns over inhumane conventional weapons were being supplemented by concerns over indiscriminate conventional weapons The focus on indiscriminate weapons when applied on a mass scale is the core of the second part of the volume Weapons of Mass Destruction are primarily weapons of the latter half of the twentieth century Although both chemical and biological warfare have long historical lineages it was only after the Second World War that technological developments meant that these weapons could be applied to cause large scale damage to non combatants this is unlike nuclear weapons which are a truly modern invention Despite being the newest Weapon of Mass Destruction they are also the weapon of which most international attention has been applied although the frameworks by which they were contained in the last century appear inadequate to address the needs of current times As a work of reference this set of three books is unrivalled and will be of immense benefit to scholars and practitioners researching and advising on the laws of warfare It also tells a story which throws fascinating new light on the history of international law and on the history of warfare itself
