The First Days of Man: As Narrated Quite Simply for Young Readers Frederic Arnold Kummer, 2020-09-28 Every child between the ages of five and fifteen seeks by constant questioning to grasp the fundamental facts upon which our whole fabric of present day knowledge is based These facts painfully gathered by the human race during its many centuries of development must of necessity be absorbed by the child within the short space of some ten or twelve years It is a prodigious task and one in which the growing mind should be afforded every possible assistance Two courses are usually adopted by parents one to dismiss the child s questions with the stock phrase You are not old enough to understand the other to place in his hands some so called book of knowledge containing it is true a great mass of information which the child should possess but usually so badly presented so jumbled together that no one fact has any bearing on another and thus the child is left to turn from Why the ocean is salt to What is a lightning rod without the least understanding of the principles and laws which underly these and all other facts and link them together in a composite whole The writer has followed with his own children a method of presenting the steps in the gradual development of man which has produced most gratifying results Instead of treating each fact each laboriously accumulated bit of human knowledge as a mere isolated patch in a crazy quilt of information he has attempted to arrange them in logical sequence to form an interesting pattern so that as the child s fund of knowledge increases he feels a deeper and deeper interest in fitting each newly acquired fact into its proper place in his mental picture of things The result is that the child is constantly building a structure which he understands His mass of accumulated knowledge is not heaped together hap hazard like a pile of blocks but each occupies its proper and logical place in a slowly developing whole He derives pleasure from what would otherwise be hard work just as he would derive pleasure from fitting together the pieces of a puzzle picture he finds himself progressing toward some understandable end and without knowing it he has not only gathered his facts and catalogued them but he has begun to think about them and their relation to each other in short he has begun the process of logical thought which is the first and greatest step in all education
