agents that are transmitted from animals to humans In June 2008 the Institute of Medicine s and National Research Council s Committee on Achieving Sustainable Global Capacity for Surveillance and Response to Emerging Diseases of Zoonotic Origin convened a workshop This workshop addressed the reasons for the transmission of zoonotic disease and explored the current global capacity for zoonotic disease surveillance

Wildlife and Emerging Zoonotic Diseases: The Biology, Circumstances and Consequences of Cross-Species Transmission James E. Childs, John S. Mackenzie, Jürgen A.

Richt, 2007-07-23 This volume offers an overview of the processes of zoonotic viral emergence the intricacies of host virus interactions and the role of biological transitions and modifying factors The themes introduced here are amplified and explored in detail by the contributing authors who explore the mechanisms and unique circumstances by which evolution biology history and current context have contrived to drive the emergence of different zoonotic agents by a series of related events

Sustaining Global Surveillance and Response to Emerging Zoonotic Diseases National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Board on Agriculture and Natural Resources, Institute of Medicine, Board on Global Health, Committee on Achieving Sustainable Global Capacity for Surveillance and Response to Emerging Diseases of Zoonotic Origin, 2010-01-24 H1N1 swine flu SARS mad cow disease and HIV AIDS are a few examples of zoonotic diseases diseases transmitted between humans and animals Zoonotic diseases are a growing concern given multiple factors their often novel and unpredictable nature their ability to emerge anywhere and spread rapidly around the globe and their major economic toll on several disparate industries Infectious disease surveillance systems are used to detect this threat to human and animal health By systematically collecting data on the occurrence of infectious diseases in humans and animals investigators can track the spread of disease and provide an early warning to human and animal health officials nationally and internationally for follow up and response Unfortunately and for many reasons current disease surveillance has been ineffective or untimely in alerting officials to emerging zoonotic diseases Sustaining Global Surveillance and Response to Emerging Zoonotic Diseases assesses some of the disease surveillance systems around the world and recommends ways to improve early detection and response The book presents solutions for improved coordination between human and animal health sectors and among governments and international organizations Parties seeking to improve the detection and response to zoonotic diseases including U S government and international health policy makers researchers epidemiologists human health clinicians and veterinarians can use this book to help curtail the threat zoonotic diseases pose to economies societies and health

Emerging Diseases/Viruses Prevention Yannick Simonin, 2023-09-15 Zoonoses represent up to 60% of infectious diseases and 75% of new diseases in humans They can cause considerable economic losses each year as recently illustrated by the COVID 19 pandemic Several factors such as intensive agricultural and livestock practices human population growth and international travel are known to contribute to the emergence of zoonotic diseases This Special Issue will cover the topic of One Health and its application in the prevention and control of emerging diseases The One Health concept recognizes that the health of humans animals vectors and their ecosystems are closely interconnected To better understand and respond to zoonotic and emerging diseases there is a need for coordinated collaborative multidisciplinary and cross sectoral approaches including human health veterinary health and environmental health In this Special Issue we invited colleagues to submit original research articles and scientific reviews to assemble a collection of papers highlighting advancements in our understanding of all aspects related to the surveillance and control of zoonotic disease including but not limited to 1 the development of new diagnostic tools 2 outbreak investigation and surveillance program for emerging pathogens including One Health approaches and 3 understanding of the mechanisms of pathogen emergence
