Telecommunications and Networking — ICT 2004 José Neuman De Souza, Petre Dini, Pascal Lorenz, 2004-07-28

Welcome to the 11th International Conference on Telecommunications ICT2004 hosted by the city of Fortaleza Brazil. As with other ICT events in the past, this professional meeting continues to be highly competitive and very well perceived by the international networking community, attracting excellent contributions and active participation. This year a total of 430 papers from 36 countries were submitted, from which 188 were accepted. Each paper was viewed by several members of the ICT2004 Technical Program Committee. We were very pleased to receive a large percentage of top quality contributions. The topics of submitted papers covered a wide spectrum from photonic techniques, signal processing, cellular networks and wireless networks to ad hoc networks. We believe the ICT2004 papers offer a wider range of solutions to key problems in telecommunications and describe challenging avenues for industrial research and development. In addition to the conference regular sessions, seven tutorials and a workshop were organized. The tutorials focused on special topics dealing with next generation networks. The workshop focused on particular problems and solutions in heavily distributed and shareable environments. We would like to thank the ICT 2004 Technical Program Committee members and referees. Without their support, the creation of such a broad conference program would not be possible. We also thank all the authors who made a particular effort to contribute to ICT2004. We truly believe that due to all these efforts, the conference program consisted of top quality contributions. We are also indebted to many individuals and organizations that made this conference possible. In particular, we would like to thank the members of the ICT2004 Organizing Committee for their help in all aspects of the organization of this professional meeting.

Methods and Models in Transport and Telecommunications Aura Reggiani, Laurie A. Schintler, 2006-03-30 One aspect of the new economy is a transition to a networked society and the emergence of a highly interconnected, interdependent and complex system of networks to move people, goods and information. An example of this is the increasing reliance of networked systems, e.g. air transportation networks, electric power grid, maritime transport, etc. on telecommunications and information infrastructure. Many of the networks that evolved today have an added complexity in that they have both a spatial structure, i.e. they are located in physical space, but also an additional spatial dimension brought on largely by their dependence on information technology. They are also often just one component of a larger system of geographically integrated and overlapping networks operating at different spatial levels. An understanding of these complexities is imperative for the design of plans and policies that can be used to optimize the efficiency, performance and safety of transportation, telecommunications and other networked systems. In one sense, technological advances along with economic forces that encourage the clustering of activities in space to reduce transaction costs have led to more efficient network structures At the same time the very properties that make these networks more efficient have also put them at a greater risk for becoming disconnected or significantly disrupted when super connected nodes are removed either intentionally or through a targeted attack      GIS for telecommunications planning and management Peter Newton,1991
