Islamic Glass Marilyn Jenkins, 1986

Imperfect Perfection - Early Islamic Glass (English Edn) Michelle Walton, Museum of Islamic Art (Doha, Qatar), 2013-09-12 A rare look into the glass collection of the Museum of Islamic Art Qatar through the eyes of an ancient and medieval glass expert and aficionado Imperfect Perfection summarises the material culture of glass from the time leading up to and during the Islamic Golden Age providing insights into the artifacts history and process of discovery The glass is extravagantly photographed to reflect the intimacy of the objects

The Arts of Fire Catherine Hess, Linda Komaroff, George Saliba, 2004 Students and scholars of the Italian Renaissance easily fall under the spell of its achievements its self confident humanism its groundbreaking scientific innovations its ravishing artistic production Yet many of the developments in Italian ceramics and glass were made possible by Italy's proximity to the Islamic world The Arts of Fire underscores how central the Islamic influence was on this luxury art of the Italian Renaissance

Published to coincide with an exhibition at the Getty Museum on view from May 4 to September 5 2004 The Arts of Fire demonstrates how many of the techniques of glass and ceramic production and ornamentation were first developed in the Islamic East between the eighth and twelfth centuries These techniques enamel and gilding on glass and tin glaze and luster on ceramics produced brilliant and colorful decoration that was a source of awe and admiration transforming these crafts for the first time into works of art and true luxury commodities Essays by Catherine Hess George Saliba and Linda Komaroff demonstrate early modern Europe's debts to the Islamic world and help us better understand the interrelationships of cultures over time

Ancient and Islamic Glass Katherine A. Larson, 2019 Glass from Islamic Lands Stefano Carboni, 2001 The book is a catalogue of the superb al Sabah Collection in Kuwait and includes clear and informative introductions to each period as well as detailed descriptions of some 500 individual objects and fragments accompanied by hundreds of colour photographs and specially commissioned line drawings It begins with the legacy of Roman and Sasanian Persian traditions in the early years of Islam and extends well over a thousand years to the last phase of glass production in Mughal India and Safavid and Qajar Iran in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries The discussion covers a huge assortment of glass forms and decorative techniques including the enamelled and gilded glass of thirteenth and fourteenth century Egypt and Syria still unsurpassed in its magnificence as well as many lesser known categories of glass common to both the early and medieval periods in many locations ranging from the undecorated to those with applied cut moulded or impressed decorations

BOOK JACKET Islamic Glass in the Corning Museum of Glass: Objects with scratch-engraved and wheel-cut ornament David Whitehouse, 2010-01-01 formerly in the collection of Ray Winfield Smith whose great interest in the early history of glass prompted him to acquire an extensive assortment of potentially informative fragments as well as display pieces Many of these are published here for the first time The Museum's holdings were also enriched by the acquisition of objects that were formerly in the collections of Maurice Nahman of Cairo Egypt and Jerome Strauss Each catalog entry consists of a detailed description usually accompanied by a comment on the history and significance of the object and by a listing of similar pieces in other collections Every object and fragment is illustrated with a color photograph and a line drawing that shows the profile The book also provides concordances and an extensive bibliography

Book Jacket Islamic Glass in the Making Nadine Schibille, 2022-03-31 New insights into the history of Islamic glassmaking The ancient glass industry changed dramatically towards the end of the first millennium The Roman glassmaking tradition of mineral soda glass was increasingly supplanted by the use of plant ash as the main fluxing agent at the turn of the ninth century CE Defining primary production groups of plant ash glass has been a challenge due to the high variability of raw materials and the smaller scale of production Islamic Glass in the Making advocates a large scale archaeometric approach to the history of Islamic glassmaking to trace the developments in the production trade and consumption of vitreous materials between the eighth and twelfth centuries and to separate the norm from the exception It proposes compositional discriminants to distinguish regional production groups and provides insights into the organisation of the glass industry and commerce during the early Islamic period. The interdisciplinary approach leads to a holistic understanding of the development of Islamic glass assemblages from the early Islamic period in Mesopotamia, Central Asia, Egypt, Greater Syria, and Iberia, which are evaluated and placed in the larger geopolitical context. In doing so, this book fills a gap in the present literature and advances a large-scale approach to the history of Islamic glass.
