Management Control of Global Supply Chains Nils Horch, 2009 Within global and rapidly changing environments cooperation and networking offer possibilities for sharing costs and risks as well as keeping up with constantly renewed information from outside the firms boundaries In line with this an effective management control of supply chain processes seems to be relevant to compete against other supply chains and to get the required information In this context an implementation of a management control institution for inter firm relations like a supply chain management control SCMC that provides relevant qualitative and quantitative data to manage supply chains reflects an important issue However a comprehensive approach with regard to the management control of the entire supply chain and how it can be fulfilled has received scant attention in prior research The aim of this thesis is therefore to analyze management control systems in global supply chains by means of a mixed methods design with special regard to functional institutional and instrumental issues In this context qualitative data are combined with theoretical insights to develop an empirical model which is tested by means of a quantitative study Following this insights into management control aspects organization of the supply chain management control management control mechanisms and the integration of suppliers are provided

The Global Governance of Food Sara R. Curran, April Linton, Abigail Cooke, Andrew Schrank, 2013-09-13 Food provides a particularly exciting and grounded research site for understanding the mechanisms governing global transactions in the 21st century While food is intimately and fundamentally related to ecological and human well being food products now travel far flung trade routes to reach us International trade in food has tripled in value and quadrupled in volume since 1960 and tracing the production movement transformation and consumption of food necessitates research that situates localities within global networks and facilitates our capacity to see the trees and the forest by zooming from the global to the local and back to the global Our need for food is a constant how we acquire food is a variable and the production commercialization and consumption of food therefore offer an invaluable window onto the globalization of the world we inhabit Food provides an ideal site for answering the fundamental questions of governance of central concern to globalization debates This book presents recent and interdisciplinary scholarship about the variety of mechanisms governing global food systems and their impacts on human and environmental well being This book was previously published as a special issue of Globalizations

Global Complexity John Urry, 2002-12-30 Global Complexity is a path breaking book which examines how the ideas of chaos and complexity can help us to analyse global processes Urry argues that there are major advantages in thinking about global processes in this way The idea of complexity emphasizes that systems are balanced between order and chaos that a system does not necessarily move towards equilibrium and that events are both unpredictable and irreversible in their effects

Hence specific events can have unexpected effects often distant in time and space from where they occurred This book combines new theory with many illustrations of how global processes operate Urry distinguishes between global networks and global fluids and shows how forms of global emergence develop from the complex relationships between these networks and fluids He draws out the implications of global complexity for our understanding of social order and argues that complexity requires us to reformulate the main categories of sociology and to reject any globalization thesis that is over unified dominant and unambiguous in its effects Global systems are always on the edge of chaos This book will be of particular interest to students and scholars of sociology politics geography and economics and to and to all those concerned with rethinking the nature of globalization
