Appraisal Processes in Emotion Klaus R. Scherer,Angela

Schorr,Tom Johnstone,2001-05-03 The scientific study of emotion has long been dominated by theories emphasizing the subjective experience of emotions and their accompanying expressive and physiological responses The processes by which different emotions are elicited has received less attention the implicit assumption being that certain emotions arise automatically in response to certain types of events or situations Such an assumption is incompatible with data showing that similar situations can provoke a range of emotions in different individuals or even the same individual at different times Appraisal theory first suggested by Magda Arnold and Richard Lazarus was formulated to address this shortcoming in our understanding of emotion The central tenet of appraisal theory is that emotions are elicited according to an individual's subjective interpretation or evaluation of important events or situations Appraisal research focuses on identifying the evaluative dimensions or criteria that predict which emotion will be elicited in an individual as well as linking the appraisal process with the production of emotional responses This book represents the first full scale summary of the current state of appraisal research Separate sections cover the history of appraisal theory and its fundamental ideas the views of some of the major theorists currently active in the field theoretical and methodological problems with the appraisal approach including suggestions for their resolution social cultural and individual differences and the application of appraisal theory to understanding and treating emotional pathology and the methodology used in appraisal research including measuring and analyzing self report physiological facial and vocal indicators of appraisal and simulating appraisal processes via computational models Intended for advanced students and researchers in emotion psychology it provides an authoritative assessment and critique of the current state of the art in appraisal research

Cognitive and affective control Gilles Pourtois, Wim Notebaert, Tom Verguts, Traditionally cognition and emotion are seen as separate domains that are independent at best and in competition at worst The French scientist and philosopher Blaise Pascal 1623 1662 famously said Le coeur a ses raisons que la raison ne connaît point The heart has its reasons that reason does not know Over the last century however psychologists and neuroscientists have increasingly appreciated their very strong reciprocal connections and interactions Initially this was demonstrated in cognitive functions such as attention learning and memory and decision making For instance an emotional stimulus captures attention e g Anderson Verguts Notebaert 2009 From this perspective cognitive control is not a cool encapsulated executive function but instead involves rapidly calculating the value of situational contextual and action cues Rushworth Behrens 2008 for the purpose of adapting the cognitive system toward future optimal performance A wide array of research has shed light on cognitive control and its interactions with affect or motivation Behaviorally important phenomena include how people respond to difficult stimuli e g incongruent stimuli task switches negative feedback or errors and how this influences subsequent task processing Neurally an important target structure has been the anterior cingulate cortex ACC and its connections to traditional emotional e g amygdala and cognitive areas e g pre motor cortex dorsolateral prefrontal cortex ACC seems to play a predominant role in integrating distant effects from remote cognitive and emotion systems in order to guide and optimize behavior The current special issue focuses on the bi directional link between emotion and cognitive control We invite studies that investigate the influence from emotion on cognitive control or vice versa the influence of cognitive control on emotion Contributions can be of different types We welcome empirical contributions behavioral or neuroscientific but also computational modeling theory or review papers By bringing together researchers from the traditionally separated domains we hope to further stimulate the crosstalk between emotion and cognitive control and thus to deepen our understanding of both
