Goods, Power, History Arnold J. Bauer, 2001-04-30 Why do we acquire the things we do Behind this apparently ingenuous question are several answers some straightforward and others more interesting To feed ourselves might be the first response for we can easily see that we expend much energy in the quest for food Clothing and shelter as well would seem to constitute our basic needs Yet we quickly see that even in the Garden of Eden people want more than they need This simple impulse has created the ever mounting abundance we call progress and nearly all of the subsequent trouble on our planet Four main interwoven themes run through this exploration of material culture and consumption in Latin America over the past five centuries supply and demand the relationships between consumption and identity the importance of ritual both ancient and modern in what we buy and the relationship between colonial and post colonial power in consumption

Learning Things Doug Blandy, Paul E. Bolin, 2018-06-08 Nothing provided

The Struggle for Mexico Debra D. Chapman, 2014-01-10 In the 1970s political and economic changes to the world order led to an emerging globalization credited with the ceding of state sovereignty to a de facto world government of transnational corporations and with the anti globalism movement directed at countering it Mexico however has maintained the salience of the national unit in the form of the state as a ruling apparatus and as the target of organized non state political opposition This study examines the transformation of Mexico's social and political organization from state corporatism to transnationalized corporatism a form distinguished by the effect that International Financial Institutions and the World Trade Organization have on the state's relationship to the rest of society By exploring how non governmental organizations political parties unions and social movements notably the Zapatistas engage with the state under neoliberalism this work significantly emphasizes the continued relevance of corporatist structures in an environment of electoral democratic reform
