Human Rights in Europe during the Cold War Rasmus Mariager, Karl Molin, Kjersti Brathagen, 2014-06-05 This book provides an overview of the establishment dispersion and effects of human rights in Europe during the Cold War The struggle for human rights did not begin at the end of the Second World War For centuries political associations religious societies and individuals had been fighting for political freedom religious tolerance freedom of expression freedom of thought and the right to participate in politics However the world was awakened by the atrocities of the Second World War and the idea that every person should have certain perpetual and inalienable rights was set out in The Universal Declaration of Human Rights UDHR from 1948 which contained an enumeration of international human rights standards Adopting an interpretative framework which pulls together universal ideas values and principles of human rights

Human Rights in Europe during the Cold War demonstrates how conflicting interests collided when the exact meaning of human rights was established. It also discusses various approaches to the idea of imposing respect for human rights in countries where they were systematically violated and assesses the outcome of international accords on human rights in particular the 1975 Helsinki Final Act. In conclusion this volume proposes that human rights functioned as moral support to the opposition in repressive regimes and that this was subsequently used as a tool to further system changes. Based on new archival research this book will be of much interest to students of Cold War studies, human rights, European history, international law and IR in general.

International Politics in Europe G. Wyn Rees, 2002-09-11

Throughout much of Europe the preoccupation with military security that dominated political thinking after the end of the Second World War has given way to an emphasis upon mutual interdependence. But what does this mean both theoretically and practically in terms of a new agenda? The focus of this book is upon four main issues: economic development, security, the environment, and human rights. These are of course not in themselves new issues but during the period of the Cold War they were subordinated to the ideological division of the continent. Now they have emerged as decisive in the way in which Europe will develop. The authors examine the four issues in depth and draw out the links between them. They also examine the various levels at which these problems exist: the level of the system, of the state, and of the individual. Thus it is possible for them to illustrate general issues with specific reference to local, national, and Europe-wide political debates.
