Eva Valor Economico Agregado:

¿Es El EVA, Realmente, Un Indicador Del Valor Económico Agregado? (Is the EVA, Really, an Indicator of Added Economic Value?) Hernan Herrera-Echeverry, 2014 Spanish Abstract En este artículo se hace un análisis sobre la validez del EVA Economic Value Added como una medida del valor generado y de su utilidad para la evaluación de proyectos de inversión. Primero se muestran varias formas de calcular el EVA haciendo ejercicios ilustrativos en cada caso posteriormente se establece la equivalencia entre el MVA Market Value Added y el VPN valor presente neto como criterios para la evaluación de proyectos de inversión finitos y perpetuos con recuperación parcial y total de la inversión. Se realiza un examen crítico mostrando las limitaciones y posibilidades del EVA como medida de valor económico agregado y se plantea la utilidad de indicadores de ingreso residual para complementar al EVA como criterios de medición de valor tales son el CVA Cash Value Added TRFC tasa de retorno del flujo de caja y Utilidad Económica UE. Finalmente se hace un ejemplo en donde se explicita cómo el valor presente del CVA coincide con el MVA y el VPN. English Abstract In this article we analyze the relevance of EVA Economic Value Added as a tool for measuring value added as well as its usefulness as an indicator in choosing investment projects. First we show five ways of calculating EVA providing examples of each case. Second we show MVA Market Value Added and NPV Net Present Value to be equivalent as criteria used to evaluate investment projects. This is done with both the limited term and the perpetual cases as well as for projects with partial and total recovery of the investment. We present a thorough analysis showing the possibilities and limitations of EVA as a value added measure. We also introduce three measurements of residual income CVA Cash Value Added Cash Flow Return on Investment CFROI and Economic Profit EP which complement EVA in the value measurement process. Finally we introduce an example that explicitly shows the equivalence between CVA's present value MVA and NPV.
