Evaluation In The Federal Government Changes Trends And Opportunities:

Evaluation in the Federal Government: Changes, Trends, and Opportunities Christopher G. Wye, 1992 A significant report on a critical topic this classic volume of the New Directions for Evaluation series is now in print and available again This issue which includes government documents pertaining to evaluation as well as contributions from federal evaluators and administrators outlines the duties responsibilities and methodological approaches of the various government offices with evaluative functions and details some of the strategies used by these agencies to cope with the twin pressures of reduced funding and greater calls to demonstrate the effectiveness of government programs pressures first felt in the 1980s and which continue to the present day The contributors discuss federal evaluation agencies in three broad categories executive branch social agencies such as the Department of Health and Human Services and the Department of Housing and Urban Development where the cutbacks were the most severe the three so called central executive branch agencies the Office of Management and Budget the Office of Personnel Management and the General Services Administration where cutbacks were less severe but still significant and where attitudes towards evaluation varied over time and the evaluative agencies of the legislative branch the General Accounting Office the Congressional Budget Office the Congressional Research Service and the Office of Technology Assessment where evaluation remained fairly robust and well funded This is the 55th volume of the quarterly report series New Directions for Evaluation

Politics and Practices of Intergovernmental Evaluation Olaf Rieper, Jacques Toulemonde, 2018-04-17 Great intellectual effort has gone into the development of sophisticated designs and methodologies to study individual policies programs and projects Costly efforts to find the smallest evidence of a policy or program impact have been undertaken in the presumption that such data are central to policy decision making Meanwhile the intergovernmental nature of political and policy governance has been ignored Whether it is Canada the United States England Denmark Sweden Germany Japan or any other industrial country the governmental structure is essentially a web of interrelated policies programs and projects To understand local responsibilities and requirements one must also understand the role that regional and national governmental agencies and administrations play

Politics and Practice of Intergovernmental Evaluation is a landmark work in the area of the evaluation of intergovernmental policies programs and projects Comparative and cross national in its perspective the material presented here not only provides a systematic theoretical and empirical treatment of intergovernmental evaluation but does so with case material from seven nations and the European Union No other such comparative work exists on this topic Contributors include Jan Eric Furubo Mary Henkel Linda G Morra Robert V Segsworth and Dale H Poel and Willi Zimmermann and Peter Knoepfel The Politics and Practice of Intergovernmental Evaluation will be of interest to political theorists policymakers and scholars and students of government and the evaluation community
