Elixhauser,2012-12-06 Over the past decades health care delivery once characterized by clearly defined relationships between medical professionals regulators and industry has become much more complex Traditional roles and relationships are changing and new decision makers are entering the scene They bring into the discussion the need for cost containment and the changing perceptions of the public with regard to the risks and benefits of health care outcomes As benefits of medical care are increasingly questioned and as scepticism and fear of advanced technologies are demonstrated by a growing body of people decision making must move beyond medical concerns to encompass economic political and sociological considerations This evolution has also affected the pharmaceutical industry Public perception of responsibility for product safety is no longer limited to regulators and physicians Manufacturers previously unencumbered by social policies governmental preoccupations or public expectations are now held accountable for product safety As a certain amount of risk acceptance is however a prerequisite for the further development of health care goods it has to be carefully balanced against society S demand for safety To weigh risks against benefits to define acceptable risk and to exclude what no longer falls within this category remain perpetual challenges Accordingly health care outcomes have to be assessed not only from a clinical point of view but also from an economic and societal perspective The assessment of drug risks and benefits has become an important political issue world wide
