Examining the Evaluation of Student Learning in the Context of Accreditation Kelsey Sellgren Kyne, 2023 Overview and Problem of Practice The evaluation of student learning in higher education is of interest to many stakeholders including students faculty higher education administrators employers governmental entities and accreditors Despite this interest many institutions struggle to successfully facilitate the process of evaluating student learning The Southern Association of Colleges and Schools Commission on Colleges SACSCOC is one of seven regional accreditors in the U S whose member institutions are required to demonstrate their compliance with the standards of SACSCOC at regular intervals One of these standards relates to the evaluation of student learning and reads The institution identifies expected outcomes assesses the extent to which it achieves these outcomes and provides evidence of seeking improvement based on analysis of the results in student learning outcomes for each of its educational programs The problem of practice PoP central to this dissertation in practice DiP is that member institutions consistently struggle to demonstrate their compliance with this standard at the time of the off site decennial review The SACSCOC reaffirmation classes of 2017 2018 and 2019 saw non compliance rates with this standard of 60% 59% and 61% respectively Purpose Study Design and Research Questions The purpose of this DiP is to identify and analyze approaches used by SACSCOC member institutions seeking to demonstrate their compliance with the assessment standard Within the context of an exploratory model I conducted a document analysis of a sample of ten SACSCOC member institutions narratives in order to understand how they sought to demonstrate their compliance with the assessment standard I developed the following four research questions to address the PoP i What approaches do institutions take to define goals for student learning ii What guidelines do institutions put in place to navigate assessment activities iii How do institutions report using the data collected in the assessment process to drive improvements iv What evidence do institutions provide that demonstrates assessment is part of the institution s culture and not an exercise done strictly for accreditation purposes Findings Each research question yielded major findings which will be summarized here Regarding research question 1 I found that one way all ten of the sampled institutions organize their assessment work is to create an institution wide schedule of assessment that delineates key activities and deadlines The major finding related to research question 2 is that there is significant variation both across and within institutions with respect to the specific instruments e g written exams surveys used when conducting assessment A primary finding related to research question 3 is that institutions commonly adjust academic supports e g embedded tutoring in response to data collected in the assessment process Regarding research question 4 I found that all ten institutions incorporate assessment into its operations in ways that are not strictly for compliance purposes e g listing learning outcomes in the catalog Implications The present study fills a gap in the literature by helping to describe the approaches institutions use to facilitate the assessment of student learning within the context of an accreditation review The findings also deviate from existing literature in two critical ways First none of the sampled institutions reported using a pre post assessment as identified by Shavelson 2010 Second unlike the CAOs in Kuh and colleagues research 2014 major changes reported by the sampled institutions related to changes in academic supports e g embedded tutoring Recommendations I have developed recommendations for both practitioners and researchers based on the findings of this study For practitioners my primary recommendations are to work toward a developing a predictable schedule of assessment within their institutions b ensuring faculty are an integral part of the assessment process and c working with internal and external stakeholders to integrate assessment into the fabric of the institution Thinking of future directions for research the present study could be built upon by gaining access to institutions compliance status as determined by SACSCOC in order to evaluate the effectiveness of their assessment approaches The current study provides a description of approaches used by institutions who are attempting to demonstrate their compliance with the assessment standard but it is not able to speak to the resulting determination of compliance by SACSCOC Another potential direction for future research involves examining the gains in student learning measured by the assessment process While the present study is unable to address those gains it may be possible to do so by obtaining the supporting documentation that accompanies the narratives and or conducting interviews with institutional personnel

Ewell, Pat Hutchings, Jillian Kinzie, 2014-12-09 American higher education needs a major reframing of student learning outcomes assessment Dynamic changes are underway in American higher education New providers emerging technologies cost concerns student debt and nagging doubts about quality all call out the need for institutions to show evidence of student learning From scholars at the National Institute for Learning Outcomes Assessment NILOA Using Evidence of Student Learning to Improve Higher Education presents a reframed conception and approach to student learning outcomes assessment The authors explain why it is counterproductive to view collecting and using evidence of student accomplishment as primarily a compliance activity Today s circumstances demand a fresh and more strategic approach to the processes by which evidence about student learning is obtained and used to inform efforts to improve teaching learning and decision making Whether you re in the classroom an administrative office or on an assessment committee data about what students know and are able to do are critical for guiding changes that are needed in institutional policies and practices to improve student learning and success Use this book to Understand how and why student learning outcomes assessment can enhance student accomplishment and increase institutional effectiveness Shift the view of assessment from being externally driven to internally motivated Learn how assessment results can help inform decision making Use assessment data to manage change and improve student success Gauging student learning is necessary if institutions are to prepare students to meet the 21st century needs of employers and live an economically independent civically responsible life For assessment professionals and educational leaders Using Evidence of Student Learning to Improve Higher Education offers both a compelling rationale and practical advice for making student learning outcomes assessment more effective and efficient

Bloom, 1974      Evaluating Student Learning in Higher Education: Beyond the Public Rhetoric William H. Rickards, Monica Stitt-Bergh, 2016-09-26 Evaluation has played a fundamental role throughout the history of higher education. It has been key to institutional missions and for accountability concerns for public funding policy and fiscal oversight. In the last 30 years there has been focused attention on the quality of education and student learning. Campuses have stepped up their initiatives to evaluate educational outcomes and communicate these to their constituencies just as regional state and national efforts have emerged regarding assessment of learning outcomes. In this context various methods and approaches to evaluative inquiry have emerged to support efforts to increase the effectiveness and efficiency of instructional practice and curriculum for higher learning. This edition examines perspectives on evaluation studies addressing higher education learning from program to institution based studies and critiques of practice to document successes and identify significant challenges that face evaluators and the collaborating educators in the continuing development of higher education. This examination represents both an investigation into the particular insights that evaluative inquiry contributes to the scholarship and practice of higher education and a reflection on the evaluation expertise that can be applied across contexts of professional practice and program development.
