of Austrian Economics Peter J. Boettke, Christopher J. Coyne, 2015-09-01 The Austrian School of Economics is an intellectual tradition in economics and political economy dating back to Carl Menger in the late 19th century Menger stressed the subjective nature of value in the individual decision calculus Individual choices are indeed made on the margin but the evaluations of rank ordering of ends sought in the act of choice are subjective to individual chooser For Menger the economic calculus was about scarce means being deployed to pursue an individual's highest valued ends The act of choice is guided by subjective assessments of the individual and is open ended as the individual is constantly discovering what ends to pursue and learning the most effective way to use the means available to satisfy those ends This school of economic thinking spread outside of Austria to the rest of Europe and the United States in the early 20th century and continued to develop and gain followers establishing itself as a major stream of heterodox economics The Oxford Handbook of Austrian Economics provides an overview of this school and its theories The various contributions discussed in this book all reflect a tension between the Austrian School's orthodox argumentative structure rational choice and invisible hand and its addressing of a heterodox problem situations uncertainty differential knowledge ceaseless change The Austrian economists from the founders to today seek to derive the invisible hand theorem from the rational choice postulate via institutional analysis in a persistent and consistent manner Scholars and students working in the field of History of Economic Thought those following heterodox approaches and those both familiar with the Austrian School or looking to learn more will find much to learn in this comprehensive volume

The Multinational Firm Glenn Morgan, Peer Hull Kristensen, Richard Whitley, 2003 In contrast to the traditional view of multinational firms as cohesive rational actors maximizing the use of resources across national boundaries the contributors to this volume argue that they are complex social arenas where competing groups draw on resources from their own socially embedded locations in developing new transnational social relationships As firms seek to manage across national and institutional boundaries they stretch their existing capacities and routines and develop new sets of transnational social relationships through different groups competing and cooperating These processes occur at a number of levels which are explored in different empirical settings Firstly at the level of governance multinational firms may develop conflicts between investors from different national contexts e.g. between the arms length orientation of Anglo Saxon institutional investors and the more committed orientation of investors in certain European and Asian contexts The tension between opening the firm up for foreign investors in order to have access to more and cheaper capital and the consequent effects on management strategy is explored in a number of chapters Secondly at the level of coordinating activities across different sites multinationals may encourage competition between plants in different countries as well as seeking to transfer best practices The result may be pressure on managers and employees in certain plants to give up traditional practices and employment rights Thirdly multinational firms operate in environments where other forms of coordinating international business activity may also occur e g cartels or the creation of international regulatory activity They therefore compete for the regulatory space in complex political environments that will enable them to prosper
