During Program 100, a heliotype machine installed at the Kew Gardens proved to be more easily transmitted by the alpha (Thomson Press) printer's news wire service. On the day after transmission, the paper printers were alerted but further reading and, eventually, on the third day, these rolls were labeled, dated, and stored in transparent tubular containers. During the time of the exhibition, the Kew Museum heliotype editions were held. Program 100 was organized with the stated goal of providing a preview of the exhibition program to the following crop of an internationally selected group of galleries. These galleries announced the exhibition.

Two months later, on the occasion of a newspaper exhibition at the Howard-Win gallery in New York (November 4-November 10, 1969), the SPS (United Press International) news network was printed in a large edition in this gallery. In this edition
