The Ballad of the Harp-Weaver and Other Poems Edna Millay, 2019
Edna St Vincent Millay born February 22 1892 Rockland Maine U S died October 19 1950 Austerlitz New York
American poet and dramatist who came to personify romantic rebellion and bravado in the 1920s Millay was reared in Camden Maine by her divorced mother who recognized and encouraged her talent in writing poetry Her first published poem appeared in the St Nicholas Magazine for children in October 1906 She remained at home after her graduation from high school in 1909 and in four years she published five more poems in St Nicholas Her first acclaim came when Renascence was included in The Lyric Year in 1912 the poem brought Millay to the attention of a benefactor who made it possible for her to attend Vassar College She graduated in 1917 In that year Millay published her first book Renascence and Other Poems and moved to Greenwich Village in New York City There she became a lively and admired figure among the avant garde and radical literary set To support herself Millay under the pseudonym Nancy Boyd submitted hackwork verse and short stories to magazines and while her ambition to go on the stage was short lived she worked with the Provincetown Players for a time and later wrote the one act Aria da Capo 1920 for them The same year she published the verse collection A Few Figs from Thistles from which the line My candle burns at both ends derives The poem was taken up as the watchword of the flaming youth of that era and brought her a renown that she came to despise In 1921 she published Second April and two more plays Two Slatterns and a King and The Lamp and the Bell She also began a two year European sojourn during which she was a correspondent for Vanity Fair Millay won a Pulitzer Prize in 1923 for Ballad of the Harp Weaver 1922 and married Eugen Jan Boissevain a Dutch businessman with whom from 1925 she lived in a large isolated house in the Berkshire foothills near Austerlitz New York In 1925 the Metropolitan Opera Company commissioned her to write an opera with Deems Taylor The resulting work The King s Henchman first produced in 1927 became the most popular American opera up to its time and published in book form sold out four printings in 20 days Millay s youthful appearance the independent almost petulant tone of her poetry and her political and social ideals made her a symbol of the youth of her time In 1927 she donated the proceeds from her poem Justice Denied in Massachusetts to the defense of Sacco and Vanzetti and personally appealed to the governor of the state for their lives Her major later works include The Buck in the Snow 1928 which introduced a more somber tone to her poetry Fatal Interview 1931 a highly acclaimed sonnet sequence and Wine from These Grapes 1934 Her letters were edited by A R Macdougall in 1952 The bravado and stylish cynicism of much of Millay s early work gave way in later years to more personal and mature writing and she produced particularly in her sonnets and other short poems a considerable body of intensely lyrical verse A final collection of her verse appeared posthumously as Mine the Harvest in 1954 britannica.com
