Health Psychology Challenging The Biomedical Model:

Health Psychology Charles L. Sheridan, Sally A. Radmacher, 1992 Not only examines the present state of health psychology but also provides the reader with an exciting glimpse of its future The differences between the biomedical and the biopsychosocial model are precisely illustrated and powerful evidence is given to demonstrate the urgent need for a change of models in order to cope with the psychological health changes of the 21st century Without relinquishing the significance of experimental or theoretical work it focuses on the practice of health psychology Along with actual case studies the summaries and discussion questions at the end of each chapter make the material both enjoyable and meaningful

Health Psychology Charles L. Sheridan, 1992 The Health Psychology Reader David Marks, David F Marks, 2002-06-06 The advent of complex and powerful computer generated statistical models has greatly eroded the former prominence of social theory in data analysis replacing it with an emphasis on statistical technique To correct this trend Carol S Aneshensel presents a method for bringing data analysis and statistical technique into line with theory She approaches this task by first providing an overview that explains the connection between data analysis statistical technique and theory This section includes a description of the elaboration model for analyzing the empirical association between two variables by adding a third variable to the analysis Aneshensel then introduces a new concept into this model the focal relationship This concept is the one cause and effect type of relationship of primary significance that is indispensable to the entire theory Building upon the focal relationship as the cornerstone for all subsequent analysis two analytic strategies are developed to establish its internal validity An exclusionary strategy to eliminate alternative explanations for the focal relationship using control and other independent variables to rule out spuriousness and redundancy
