Message from our chair

Dear colleagues and friends of the HRWM family!

It is almost exactly 100 years ago that a virus caused one of the most severe pandemics in human history. The so-called Spanish flu (1918-1919), caused by the H1N1 influenza A virus, infected 500 million people and has cost several million people their lives. Now, in the last few months, we are facing the COVID-19 pandemic and the virus SARS-CoV-2 has changed our lives dramatically, both personally and professionally, and will continue to affect them. Our sympathy goes out to all those who have lost family members or friends or who have had worries about them.

In contrast to 1918, all scientific forces have now been activated and bundled on a global scale and interdisciplinary knowledge about this infectious disease was developed almost online. Methods, analyses, models, statistics and prognoses were developed by virologists, epidemiologists, infectiologists and statisticians, measures with different approaches were implemented by the governments and complied with by the population.
