Effects of Ionising and Non-Ionising Radiation Georges Tymen,John A. Hoskins,2002 Every day we are exposed to natural radiation such as radon and ultraviolet light and sometimes also to the radiation burden from medical investigations

Moreover our lifestyle subjects us to increasing amounts of modern radiation caused by VDUs and mobile phones which add to our overall load High levels of radiation are known to cause often profound changes in cell chemistry with inevitable clinical effect At a certain level a clear dose response may be observed However effects caused by low level radiation are difficult to demonstrate particularly when the sources are different and numerous But this does not mean that there is no effect Considerable research is being conducted into the effect of low level radiation on the body and first results are presented in this issue Dealing with all forms of radiation on the body this issue is of great interest for medical or health practitioners as well as for designers and producers of consumer equipment which generates electromagnetic radiation

Studies,Commission on Life Sciences,Committee on Health Effects of Exposure to Low Levels of Ionizing Radiations (Beir VII),1998-08-04 The US Environmental Protection Agency Office of Radiation and Indoor Air asked the National Research

Council to evaluate whether sufficient new data exist to warrant a reassessment of health risks reported in Health Effects of

Exposure to Low Levels of Ionizing Radiations BEIR V in 1990 To respond to this request the National Research Council assembled the Committee on Health Risks of Exposure to Low Levels of Ionizing Radiations The work of the committee was conducted in what was called the BEIR VII phase 1 study To assist the committee during its deliberations various scientists were consulted for advice and a workshop on the impact of biology on risk assessment was held in collaboration with the Department of Energy Office of Health and Environmental Research The intent of the workshop was to address the
