These programs are comprehensive exercise programs in the community that include aerobics, strength building, flexibility and balance, and health education, and a health contract calendar to help older adults change health behaviors. Health Promotion and Aging David Haber, 2019-08-12 I was trained at the University of Southern California as a sociologist looking at the big picture and specializing in gerontology, but I spent my career implementing and evaluating small health promotion projects in the community. This divergence between training and practice has informed me on why promoting health is possible but difficult. From a sociological perspective, it is clear to me that American society is not particularly health promoting. For example, computers are increasingly promoting sedentary behavior both at work and at play. A fast-paced society encourages us to seek convenient food and drink choices, and ubiquitous advertising to the tune of tens of billions of dollars per year promotes questionable foods and drinks over good nutrition. And the considerable stress engendered by a dynamic society can lead to smoking, excessive alcohol consumption, or engaging in other risky behaviors.

Health Promotion and Aging David Haber, 2003 Focusing on research findings and practical applications, the author in this new edition continues to stress the importance of collaboration and communication between health professionals and their clients. The book is based on the premise that health professionals should be health educators. American Journal of Health Behavior, 2000 Contemporary Issues in Gerontology Victor Minichiello, Irene Coulson, 2012-09-10 Written by leading international experts, this book helps students and practitioners to better understand and cater for the needs of our ageing population. It examines how services can be provided to meet the expectations and needs of a growing population of ageing citizens within a cost-effective, social justice, and positive ageing framework. How resources allocated to aged care can be distributed equitably to better meet the demands associated with housing, retirement, service provision, and care. How health promotion principles can contribute to a healthy older population. Investigating current critical debates in health and social science, the book explores innovative new approaches to aged care and ageing. By using international examples and a multidisciplinary approach, this comprehensive textbook provides a broad understanding of ageing from a social perspective and analyzes concepts of ageism, healthy ageing, and positive ageing.

Handbook of Gerontology James A. Blackburn, Catherine N. Dulmus, 2007-06-15 A multidisciplinary resource that combines the latest research with the best practices for working with older adults.
