doctor's judgment and make sure that you discuss all these issues with your doctor and follow these instructions to ensure a healthy pregnancy journey and safe delivery. You need to understand that your daily life will be changed and the sooner you adjust to your new diet and overall health problems the better it will be. Your new life will begin when you have a positive pregnancy test. This is when you think about the challenges that lie ahead and how you can manage your overall experience and pregnancy. Stress is the first thing that you are going to notice when you are pregnant. The women who suffer from premenstrual syndrome understand how stress affects their minds when their bodies are going through different changes. The hormone shifts that happen during pregnancy are the most severe pain women have to face in their entire life. It is common to see pregnant women snap at the smallest of things and lose their temper. Women feel more fatigued during pregnancy and this tiredness can increase the stress that they face. The women also face the strain of whether their baby will be healthy or not and this stress affects their body and increases the mood swings. You need to understand that mood swings are frequent when you are pregnant and you should try to stay as relaxed as possible. Your friends and family should understand that you are not the only pregnant woman suffering from mood swings. Many women think that stress affects pregnancy but there are no reports where stress has tweaked the baby's growth. Stress is a very complicated concept and every person has their way of dealing with stress. Stress level changes the hormones in the body. Doctors suggest that you need to learn to control the stress when you are pregnant as chronic stress can lead to increased blood pressure and preterm labor issues in women who are pregnant. While being pregnant you will see many emotional and physical changes in yourself. Some common changes that you will feel are muscle cramps, mood swings, and elevated stress. You may have felt these changes in the past but when you are pregnant you will feel these changes in high intensity. You will understand how these changes will affect your lifestyle and how you can manage them during pregnancy. Let your partner and your family read this to understand what your body and mind are going through.
